Media Information

CREDENTIALS: Requests for working press credentials at Carolina home games should be made in writing on company letterhead to Rick Brewer in the Sports Information Office. Brewer's mailing address is P.O. Box 2126, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27514.

Because of the demand for credentials, media agencies which cover Carolina and the visiting school on a regular basis will receive top priority. Other credentials will be issued on the basis of circulation and the availability of space. Tickets will be mailed if at all possible. Otherwise, they will be left at Will Call which is at gate six, directly behind the press box.

Requests are screened with care to insure a working press box. Children, spouses, dates and pets are not allowed in compliance with the working code of the Football Writers Association of America.

PRESS BOX SERVICES: Programs, flip cards, statistics and notes will be provided before each game. A play-by-play will be distributed at the conclusion of each quarter. Halftime statistics will also be available. Complete team and individual statistics, a scoring summary and coaches' quotes will be provided after the game.

Lunch will be served before each game and at halftime behind the main working press area. Soft drinks and coffee will be available throughout the game.

SIDELINE POLICY: Photographers will not be allowed on the sidelines without an armband. Armbands can be picked up in the press box prior to the game. Each photographer must pick up his or her own armband. Under NCAA and Atlantic Coast Conference guidelines, photographers are not allowed inside the 25-yard lines and must remain outside the restraining lines surrounding the field.

PARKING: Press parking at Kenan Stadium is available on an extremely limited basis. Requests for parking passes should be made in advance to Rick Brewer. The parking lot is located on the corner of Gravely Drive and Manning Drive.

POST—GAME INTERVIEWS: Coach Mack Brown will meet with the media following each game after a 10-15 minute cooling-off period. The Carolina locker room will be open to the press at that time.

FILING COPY: The Department of Athletics furnishes a number of telephones for writers to use in moving their copy. Anyone desiring a private phone should contact Southern Bell in Chapel Hill.

The Carolina Sports Information Office has one telecopier which will be available for filing. An operator's fee of $10 will be charged for its use. This fee will go to a student assistant who will stay late to send copy.

INTERVIEWS WITH COACH BROWN: Mack Brown will be available to the media at a press luncheon each Tuesday during the football season. Television and radio tapes can be done at 11:30 a.m. with lunch being served at noon. The press conference follows the meal at Kenan Fieldhouse.

Interviews with Brown at other times during the week can be set up by contacting the Sports Information Office or Becky Medford, Coach Brown's secretary, in the Football Office. Best time to get the coach is between 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday. The number is (919) 966-2575.

The 1989 OUTLOOK

Jonathan Hall won the quarterback job with a strong spring showing.

North Carolina heads into the second year of the Mack Brown coaching era with hopes for an improved football team.

However, much work must still be done before the Tar Heels get their program back to where it was a few seasons ago and are ready to again challenge for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship on an annual basis.

Progress has been made in many areas in the last year. Even though Carolina will be a younger football team this fall than in 1988, the Tar Heels should have better overall strength and speed. That improvement is the direct result of hard work in the squad's off-season conditioning program.

With a number of key players returning, Carolina should be a much better defensive team this year. The Tar Heels, playing young and inexperienced people, did not perform well on defense last fall. The defensive unit will again be young this season, but there is more experience. Depth, however, is a major concern.

A solid showing in spring practice by Jonathan Hall stabilized the quarterback situation. Carolina used three different starters at that position last year. It's amazing that the Tar Heels played as well as they did on offense in 1988 considering the many changes made under center.

But, there are still plenty of problems to be solved. Many of them are directly related to two amazing figures—Carolina will have only 80 players on scholarship this fall and of those, 54 will be either freshmen or sophomores. That means a lack of depth and a lot of inexperience.

The Tar Heels return just 33 of 62 lettermen from 1988—11 on offense, 19 on defense and three specialists. Seven starters are back defensively, but just four on offense.

Despite the numbers situation, Brown is pleased with what has been accomplished since he arrived on campus in December, 1987.

"We've improved as a football team since the end of last season," he says. "Our players should get a large amount of credit for the work they've put into rebuilding this program. They've had a great attitude and that's made what we've asked them to do so much easier.

"Our program is far from where we want it to be and from where it needs to be. But, we're heading in the right direction.

"Early last year we were playing dominating opponents (South Carolina, Oklahoma and Auburn in the first four games) and were not able to get into a ball game. Then in the latter part of the year, when we were in most games, we couldn't make the plays necessary to win. Those early games had killed any confidence we might have had.

"An important thing for us to do is get our players to have a better self-image of themselves and regain confidence. Once we put ourselves in a position to win a close game, we have to have what it takes to go ahead and win it. A lot of that simply comes with confidence."

A year ago Brown and his staff knew virtually nothing about their team. Now they have a much better feeling for their personnel's capabilities which was a tremendous help in spring practice and in planning for the new season.

"I thought spring practice went very well," says Brown. "We had some problems, but overall it went much better than it did in 1988. The fact we knew the players was the big reason for that. In 1988 we spent most of the spring just evaluating. This year we were able to spend more time actually trying to improve."

There are plenty of concerns heading into the fall. The passing game is one of them. It must be better and Hall needs to be healthier than he was last year for that to occur. The offensive line must be realigned with four of five regulars from last season missing. The defense needs to show progress in all areas of play and there should be more consistency in the kicking game.

Heading the cast of returning players for Carolina are two All-Atlantic Coast Conference performers from a year ago—offensive guard Pat Crowley and tailback Kennard Martin. Crowley is one of the premier players in the country and Martin could be if he's able to play. He was suspended from the team by Brown in late April for inconsistencies in his academic work.

Inconsistency is something Brown hasn't had to worry about with Crowley. The 6-3, 288-pound senior from Hampton Bays, N.Y. ranks as a leading candidate for All-America honors. An all-conference player for each of the past two years, he has a chance to become only the second offensive lineman in ACC history to be an all-league selection three times.

Big, strong and intense, he's a tremendous drive blocker. However, Crowley also has the agility and quickness necessary to be effective on sweeps and has developed into an outstanding pass protector, too. He has great leadership qualities and that will be especially important because he's going to be surrounded up front by so many inexperienced players. He was sensational throughout spring practice and has made all of the pre-season all-star checklists.

Martin, a 5-10, 200-pound junior from Winston-Salem, N.C., was one of the biggest surprises of the 1988 season. He opened the fall behind Torin Dorn at tailback, eventually became the starter as Dorn was slowed with injuries and ended the year as the ACC rushing leader. Martin finished with 1,146 yards and also had an ACC-high 5.9 yards-per-rush average. He was 14th in the country in rushing. In the process, he became Carolina's 19th 1,000-yard rusher. That's the most of any school in the nation.

Like Crowley, Martin is a dominating player. He's tough to knock off his feet and gained a lot of his yardage after being initially hit by a defender. But, he's also quick and fast enough to out-run tacklers, too. He's a game-breaking player.

A decision on whether Martin will be allowed to re-join the team will be made by Brown in late July or early August. If he is unavailable, it will be a tremendous blow to a Carolina attack which has already suffered severe graduation losses.

Without Martin, the Tar Heels will play veteran Aaron Staples and newcomer Randy Jordan at tailback. Staples had just six carries last season for 25 yards. A 5-9 ½, 196-pound senior from Fieldale, Va., Staples had an outstanding spring and could be a solid contributor.

Jordan, a 5-10, 191-pound sophomore from Warrenton, N.C., is an unknown quantity. Because of Proposition 48, he was unable to compete or practice last season. Instead, he used his first year to get his college career off to a sound academic start. A high school track star, Jordan could give the Tar Heels the breakaway threat they need in the backfield.

Michael Benefield, who played well behind James Thompson last year, will take over at fullback. He actually played about half the time last fall as the fullbacks alternated on almost every down, bringing in plays from the sidelines. He's a fine blocker, a very good runner and an exceptional receiver.

Depth at fullback will come from a pair of red-shirt freshmen, Mike Faulkerson and B.J. Runyon. Faulkerson was impressive in the spring and nailed down the top backup position. The 6-4, 218-pound Runyon, who was moved from defense, has excellent size and shows promise for the future.

The quarterback situation is in much better shape than it was a year ago after Hall's strong showing in the spring. A 6-0 ½, 191-pound senior from Vienna, Va., Hall played in eight games last fall after missing the entire 1987 season because of a shoulder injury. But, he had trouble throwing the ball due to that long layoff. He simply was not the same player who had performed so well during the 1985 and 1986 seasons.

However, his shoulder was much stronger in the spring after he went through the winter's off-season lifting program. He threw the ball harder and with more accuracy. His improved passing helped him regain the confidence he may have lost last fall and he re-established himself as the team's offensive leader.

Hall's presence in the huddle will be important because Carolina will be playing so many young and inexperienced players this fall. When he was at his best as a freshman and sophomore, he displayed great self-confidence. Other players could see that and it helped increase their confidence. Brown is hoping that will happen again.

Behind Hall is Todd Burnett, a 6-6, 192-pound sophomore from Burke, Va. He started the final five games last year. He probably wasn't ready to play, but was forced into action as the Tar Heels were looking for an offensive spark. He provided one in his first start, directing a 20-17 victory over Georgia Tech. With continued progress, he can be a fine quarterback.

Carolina's passing game must be greatly improved this year if the Tar Heels are to be a better team. But, it was difficult to work on that during spring practice as there were only three scholarship wide receivers on the team. One of those, red-shirt freshman Joey Jauch, missed all but four days of work with an injury, leaving only Eric Blount and Kurt Green to practice with the quarterbacks.

Blount, a 5-8, 183-pound sophomore from Ayden, N.C., caught 17 passes as a true freshman in 1988. He is a returning starter at split end. Green made six catches in a backup role.

"Obviously, we don't have a lot of experience or numbers at these positions," says Brown. "We're bringing in four freshman wideouts. So, along with Jauch, that's five new receivers who will be working with our quarterbacks in the fall. That's not a good situation when we're having problems with our passing game, anyway."

There will also be new faces at tight end. Gone are the top two players from a year ago, John Keller and Damon Hueston. That leaves Brian Bollinger, who did not have a reception as the third-teammer last season, to handle the starting job. Red-shirt freshman Craig Brown and sophomore Deems May will also see action there. May, a quarterback last fall, was shifted to this position following spring practice. He could develop into a fine player.

The offensive line was a major question mark going into the spring with Crowley as the only returning starter. Gone were guard Steve Steinbacher; tackle Creighton Incorminias, a four-year starter; tackle Darrell Hamilton, a third-round selection in the NFL draft; and center Jeff Garnica, a third-team Associated Press All-America and winner of the Jacobs Blocking Trophy as the best blocker in the ACC.

Roy Barker (92) and Bernard Timmons (42) led a host of tacklers on this play last fall.

However, Carolina came out of the spring with replacements at each of those spots. The development of the line, in fact, was one of the highlights of the off-season practice sessions.

Replacing Garnica at center will be Carl Watts, a 6-3, 250-pound senior from Hampton, Va. He played a lot last fall behind Steinbacher at guard and started three times. The team's second-most experienced lineman, he was shifted to center during spring practice. He's capable of being an exceptional player. Also in the picture there is David Boon, a 6-3½, 260-pound sophomore, who was the top reserve last fall.

Starting opposite Crowley at left guard is Alec Millen, a 6-6, 253-pound red-shirt freshman from Atlanta, Ga. He is one of Carolina's best young players and was moved to guard from tackle after Watts went to center. He has the potential to be a fine player in the future if he continues to improve.

Kevin Donnalley won the left tackle spot with Andrew Oberg moving in on the right side. Donnalley was one of the team's most impressive performers during the spring. A 6-5, 270-pound junior from Raleigh, N.C., he is a transfer from Davidson and had to sit out last season because of that change in colleges. Oberg is a 6-7, 263-pound sophomore from Rochester, Pa. who did not play last fall. However, he did a good job in the spring work.

While inexperience will be a problem in the offensive interior, the biggest concern there is a lack of depth. Bill Boyd, a 6-8, 288-pound junior, is the backup at both tackles and Andy Dinkin, a 6-2, 264-pound sophomore, is the main reserve at guard. An injury anywhere in the line would be a disaster for Brown and his team.

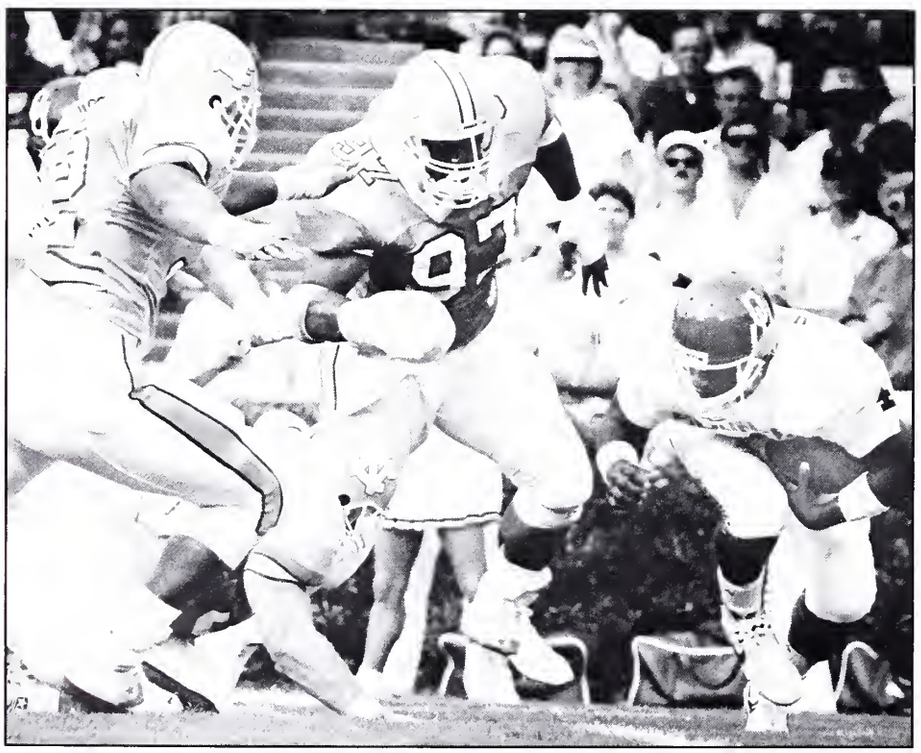
While Brown believes his young blockers will perform well, they still must prove themselves in game conditions.

"One of the first things we must do this season is re-establish ourselves in the running game because we are so young in the line," he says. "But, we've also got to revise our passing attack because we have to throw the football better than last year. We must have better balance between the run and the pass because we will not be able to line up and knock people off the line of scrimmage as we could do last season with a veteran offensive line. We definitely must be more wide open offensively."

Defensively, Carolina must build on what was started last fall. Several young players were forced into action last year before they were really ready. Now they're back and have some game experience. That should be a help in the new season.

Three defenders figure to challenge for all-star honors this fall. Those players are tackle Cecil Gray, linebacker Dwight Hollier and cornerback Torin Dorn. In addition, a couple of others show fine promise for the future. As on offense, the biggest defensive problem is a lack of numbers.

With continued development and more consistency, the front defensive seven has the possibility of being a good one. The line is anchored by Gray, a 6-4 ½, 280-pound senior from Virginia Beach, Va., who is the team's most experienced defensive player. Gray is a three-year letterman who played behind NFL regulars Tim Goad and Reuben Davis for two seasons and then started last fall. He was brilliant at times, winning second-team All-ACC honors. He then had a great spring and could be on the brink of a superb senior season.



Cecil Gray (97) registered this sack of Oklahoma's Jamelle Holieway last season.

If Gray performs as he is capable, he'll be one of the best players in college football. He has that much ability. He must also take a major leadership role on the young defensive unit.

Roy Barker, who played at the opposite tackle last fall, was moved to nose guard during the spring with Dennis Tripp shifting from nose to tackle. The change was made to get Barker's 6-4 ½, 264-pound frame in the middle of the defense so opposing offenses would have less success running the ball there. Barker, a sophomore from Central Islip, N.Y., has great potential. With continued progress, he's a future all-star candidate.

Tripp, a 6-3, 258-pound junior from Farmville, N.C., gives the Tar Heels more quickness at tackle. He was a starter early last season at nose guard before suffering a knee injury at Auburn. However, he came back from that to play down the stretch. He's very competitive and could be a solid player.

Reserves in the defensive front are expected to be J.R. Boldin at nose guard and Alex Simakas and Rickie Shaw at tackle. Boldin, a 6-1 ½, 255-pound red-shirt freshman from Chapel Hill, has the quickness to complement Barker very well in the middle. Simakas is a 6-2, 252-pound junior from Pittsburgh, Pa. who plays with a lot of savvy. Shaw, a 6-5, 267-pound sophomore from Whiteville, N.C., saw action as a true freshman last fall and then pushed for a starting job in the spring. "Potential" is again the word to use in describing him as he must improve in a number of areas, but is capable of doing so.

Two new starters will open at outside linebacker. Antonio Goss has gone on to the NFL and John Reed was shifted to inside linebacker during the spring. The move of Reed was made because of a lack of depth inside and the fact there were a number of candidates for the outside positions.

Starters heading into the fall are Eric Gash, a 6-2, 220-pound sophomore from Hendersonville, N.C., and Don Millen, a 6-4, 222-pound junior from Atlanta, Ga. Gash is one of Carolina's best young defenders. He played as a true freshman last fall and gained some valuable experience. He's very intelligent and could eventually be a star in the ACC.

Millen was a fine special teams player a year ago and also played in a backup role on the line of scrimmage. He's another very smart player and an intense competitor.

Also sure to see action at these spots are Willie Joe Walker, a 6-1, 243-pound senior from Bradenton, Fla., and Stuffy Hewitt, a 6-2, 205-pound junior from Catawba, N.C. Walker, who was switched to this position from tackle, was battling Millen for a starting job until suffering a shoulder injury late in spring practice. He has outstanding quickness, recording five tackles for losses and a team-high four sacks last fall. He didn't have the size needed at tackle, but shows good possibilities at outside linebacker. Hewitt saw considerable action in the secondary last year.

Back at inside linebacker are Carolina's top two tacklers from last season—Hollier and Bernard Timmons. Hollier was in on 117 hits in 1988 as a red-shirt freshman and Timmons had 111. Both have the ability to be outstanding players. Hollier, in particular, has shown he's capable of being one of the best defenders in the ACC. A 6-2, 226-pound sophomore from Hampton, Va., he was named one of the three best freshman linebackers in the country last year by The Sporting News. He's aggressive and very mature on the field. And like all great linebackers, he has a nose for the football.

Timmons, a 6-0 ½, 214-pound junior from Fort Bragg, N.C., runs well and is a hitter. However, he suffered a leg injury late in the spring and will go into the fall behind Reed at his linebacker post. A 6-1 ½, 220-pound senior from Tampa, Fla., Reed made a quick transition from outside to inside linebacker. He's a contact player and this actually seems to be a more natural position for him. Also in the picture at linebacker is red-shirt freshman Randall Parsons.

One area which should especially show improvement from 1988 is the secondary. There is better overall athletic ability at the four spots and depth at cornerback.

The biggest off-season personnel moves came in the defensive backfield and while the results won't be known until the season starts, Brown feels good about the changes.

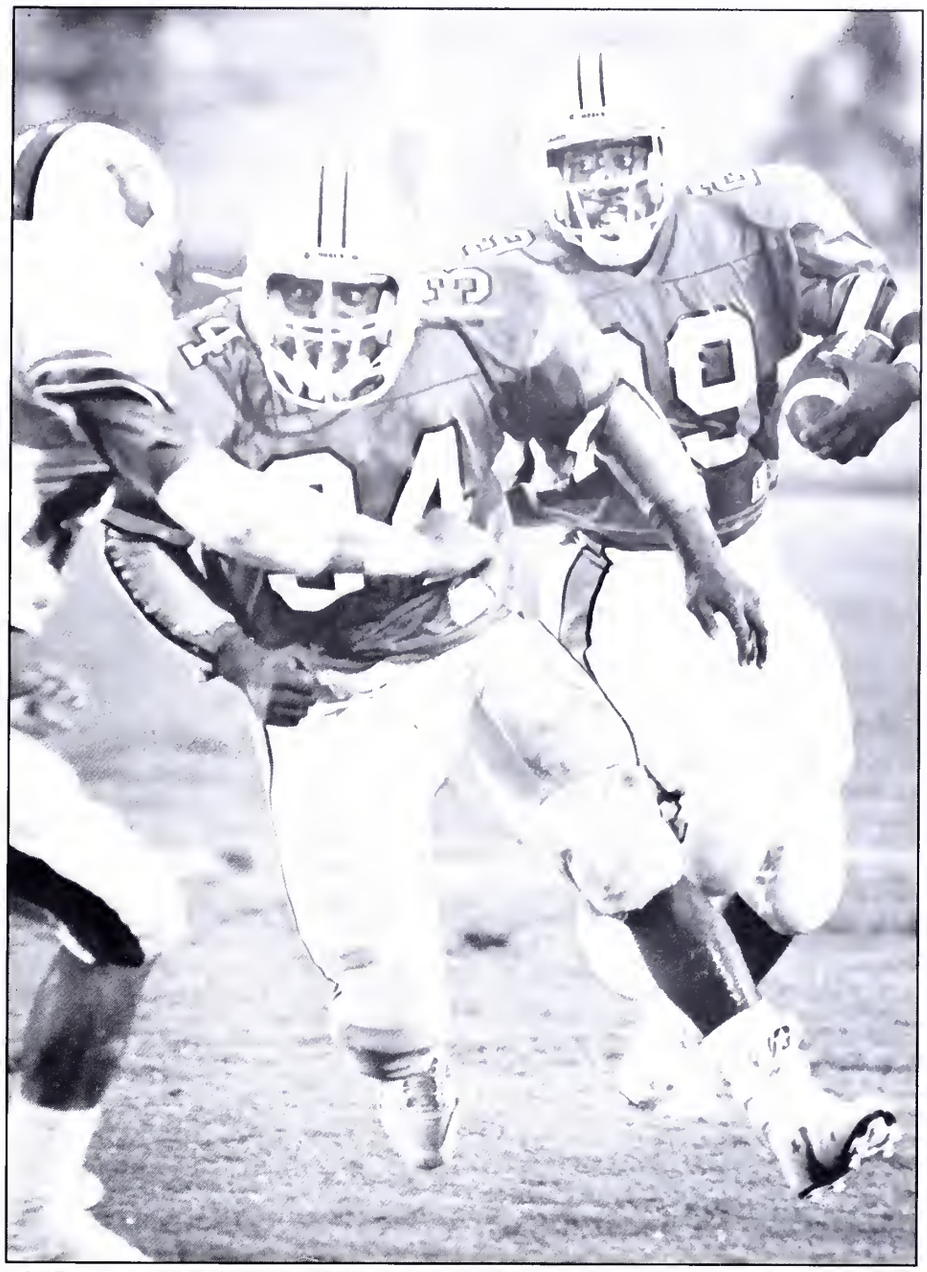
Dorn, a 6-1, 202-pound senior from Southfield, Mich. and a three-year tailback, was moved to left cornerback in one of the two most highly-publicized shifts. The other sent Reggie Clark, a 6-1 ½, 212-pound junior from Charlotte, N.C., from wide receiver to strong safety.

Dorn was outstanding throughout spring practice. He obviously lacks experience and is going to make mistakes. But, he has the speed to overcome his mistakes and still make plays. Speed was Carolina's biggest deficiency in the secondary last fall. Dorn's presence provides more of that.

Clark is an excellent all-around athlete who has been tried at tailback as well as wide receiver in an effort to find the best position for him. Now he seems to have found a home at strong safety. He runs well and gives the Tar Heels excellent size at this position.

When Dorn moved to cornerback, he took the spot played by Doxie Jordan last year. Jordan, a 5-11, 179-pound sophomore from Hampton, Va., was then shifted to free safety, the position he played in high school. He had a great spring at that spot and seems more comfortable there than at cornerback.

Clarence Carter will be the fourth secondary starter. The 5-11, 190-pound senior from Toledo, Ohio will work at right cornerback, where he started the final three games last year.



Michael Benefield (34) led the blocking as Kennard Martin gained 160 yards against Louisville.

A pair of seniors who have started in the past, Skeet Baldwin and Larry Whiteside, should provide depth at the corners. However, red-shirt freshman Russell Gibson ended the spring as the top backup at both safeties.

"We're certainly not where we want to be defensively," says Brown. "But, we are much better than we were last year. We've got some outstanding individuals, guys who I think can be exceptional players. We just need more of them."

In the kicking game, Carolina returns place-kicker Clint Gwaltney, punter Scott McAlister and deep snapper Bryan Hough. Gwaltney took over the place-kicking duties at mid-season last fall and made six of seven field goal attempts and 14 straight PATs. His only missed field goal came from 50 yards. However, he has the ability to be a fine long-range kicker. He missed spring practice with mononucleosis, but will be ready to go this fall.

McAlister averaged 39.9 yards a punt last year and the Tar Heel coverage team allowed opponents only 5.7 yards a return. That phase of play should be strong again.

"This football team has worked as hard as any I've been around," says Brown. "I've been so impressed by the enthusiasm our players have shown and the attitude they've had about what we've asked them to do. Because of our youth and inexperience, I don't know how many wins we're going to be able to show for that work this fall. But, with the kind of commitment we've gotten from our players, success is definitely coming again for this football program."

The Offensive Personnel

A Position-By-Position Look

Tight End: Damon Hueston and John Keller, who split time at this position last year, have both graduated, leaving this spot a question mark. Brian Bollinger, the number three man in 1988, is the likely starter. He's a good blocker, but needs to improve as a receiver and has very little game experience. Craig Brown, a red-shirt freshman, ended the spring as the top backup. A player who could make an impact is Deems May, who was shifted here from quarterback after the end of spring practice. In experience will be a problem at this position.

Tackle: Tackle loomed as a major area of concern when spring practice opened. Gone were starters Darrell Hamilton and Creighton Incorminias and top reserve Tim Brooks. However, sophomore Andrew Oberg and junior transfer Kevin Donnalley eased some of those worries with outstanding springs. They lack experience, but they definitely have the ability to handle these two starting roles. Depth is a problem with junior Bill Boyd as the top backup on both sides.

Guard: In Pat Crowley, the Tar Heels have one of the finest linemen in the nation. He's a three-year starter and a two-time All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection. Even though his job was secure, he pushed himself to have a sensational spring and now ranks as a leading All-America candidate. Alec Millen, a red-shirt freshman, ended the spring as the starter at the opposite guard slot. He has tremendous potential for the future. He lacks experience right now, but is going to be an exceptional player. As at most positions, depth is a concern. Sophomore Andy Dinkin could be a capable reserve on one side. However, the race for the other number two guard spot is wide open going into the fall.

Center: Missing at this position from last year's squad is third-team All-America Jeff Garnica, winner of the Jacobs Blocking Trophy in the ACC. Replacing him will be extremely difficult. However, Carl Watts, shifted from guard, is capable of doing a solid job. He needs a little more game experience at this spot, but could develop into one of the league's best centers. David Boon, who saw some action behind Garnica last year, is again back in reserve.

Wide Receiver: This could be another problem spot. With only three scholarship players on the team at this position last spring, it was difficult to make a lot of personnel decisions. Complicating matters was an injury which sidelined one of those three—Joey Jauch—for most of the spring. That leaves Eric Blount at split end and Kurt Green at flanker. After that are a lot of question marks. This is a spot where incoming freshmen have a chance to make an immediate impact. That's what Blount did last fall. He was a greatly improved player last spring, showing signs of developing into a top-flight wide receiver.

Quarterback: A solid spring showing has pushed Jonathan Hall into the starting job for the fall. He threw the ball much better in the spring than at any time last season. After shoulder surgery sidelined him for the entire 1987 campaign, he simply was slow recovering his throwing ability. However, hard work in the off-season conditioning program produced impressive results during spring practice. Hall gives Carolina experience, confidence and good running ability at this position. Behind him is sophomore Todd Burnett, who was forced into action late last season. He started the final five games of the year even though he probably wasn't ready for college competition. Considering his inexperience, he did an exceptional job. Now, if Hall's passing continues to improve, he can be brought along more slowly and provide good relief help.

Tailback: The uncertain status of Kennard Martin puts a cloud over this position. Martin, an all-conference player and the ACC's leading rusher last fall, has been suspended from the squad by Coach Mack Brown. A decision on whether he will be able to rejoin the team probably won't be made until August. If he's back, tailback becomes a team strength. Without him, there are a lot of questions. Top reserve Aaron Staples only had six carries last year. He was outstanding in spring practice and coaches have confidence in his ability, but he still must prove himself over the course of a season. Behind him is sophomore Randy Jordan, who did not compete last fall.

Fullback: Michael Benefield, who split time with James Thompson here last fall, returns for his junior season. He is a solid player and should give Carolina fine play. Red-shirt freshman Mike Faulkerson did a good job in the spring to win the number two spot. If he continues to improve, the Tar Heels should have a good two-deep here. Further help could come from former outside linebacker B.J. Runyon.

A Position-By-Position Look

Outside Linebacker: Although there isn't a lot of experience at this position, there is talent and depth. Last year's starters are both gone—Antonio Goss to the National Football League and John Reed to inside linebacker. Reed's move, in fact, was made possible because coaches felt there was good, young talent available here. Sophomore Eric Gash, who played down the stretch last fall, could be a future star. He has all the tools to be one of the best players in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Don Millen, a backup last year, and former tackle Willie Joe Walker are quite capable of being regulars. Walker could be a great player if he's fully recovered from a shoulder injury suffered in the spring. Another possibility for playing time is former defensive back Stuffy Hewitt.

Tackle: This position features one of Carolina's best players in Cecil Gray. After serving as a backup for two years, he did a solid job last fall in his first season as a starter. He could be one of the top defenders in college football. Starting opposite him will be Dennis Tripp, who has been switched from nose guard. Tripp brings great quickness to the position, but needs to get a little bigger. Top reserves should be sophomore Rickie Shaw and veteran Alex Simakas. Shaw showed promise as a true freshman last year and then had an outstanding spring. Simakas isn't as physically imposing as some linemen, but has great techniques and is very smart. He could play anywhere up front.

Nose Guard: Roy Barker, who started at tackle last season, was moved to this spot in the spring and did an outstanding job. To make Carolina's defensive scheme really work, a great player is needed here and Barker could be that player. He's big, strong and quick. Red-shirt freshman J.R. Boldin has the ability to also play this position. As he gains experience, he should complement Barker very well.

Linebacker: This could be one of the team's strengths on defense. Both starters from last year, Dwight Hollier and Bernard Timmons, are back. In addition, John Reed, a two-year regular at outside linebacker, was shifted here in the spring. Red-shirt freshman Randall Parsons has displayed good potential and Mike Hopkins showed he could be a spot player with a fine spring.

Hollier was Carolina's leading tackler last fall and looms as a leading all-star candidate in his sophomore season. He played very well during the last half of the 1988 season and could be headed for a great career. Timmons has a lot of natural ability, but must avoid the injuries which have plagued him in the past. In fact, a leg injury sidelined him the latter part of last spring, allowing Reed to take over his starting job. They should wage a battle for that spot in the fall. Reed had a big spring and seems more at home here than he did on the outside. He could have a great year. Parsons lacks experience, but has the ability to play. Plus, he's still young and is going to get bigger and stronger.

Cornerback: Two former tailbacks, Clarence Carter and Torin Dorn, are the likely starters at these positions. Carter started the final three games last fall after playing as a backup prior to that. Dorn was only moved to the secondary last spring in the biggest personnel move of the off-season. He has the speed and athletic ability to be a star at this spot. Obviously, experience is a concern. But, he has adapted to defense quickly and runs so well he can overcome some of the mistakes he's sure to make. He could be one of the biggest surprises in the ACC. Backups Skeet Baldwin and Larry Whiteside are both former starters and thus give the Tar Heels experienced depth.

Safety: Gone are strong safety Dan Vooletich and the two players who split the free safety starting duties, Victor Bullock and Terrence Fedd. Moving in at strong safety is Reggie Clark, a wide receiver a year ago. He has great athletic ability, but has never been able to fit in at one position. He may have found it on defense. He had an outstanding spring and, with experience, could be a solid player. Doxie Jordan, a starter late last year at cornerback, has moved into the starting job at free safety. This seems to be a better position for him than cornerback. He's a very intelligent player who always knows where to be on the field. That savvy should make him an especially effective free safety. Depth at these spots is a major problem with only red-shirt freshman Russell Gibson making an impression in the spring.

A Conversation With Mack Brown

Q. How would you assess the status of your football program at the present time?

A. I think we've made tremendous progress in a lot of areas in the year and a half we've been here. Our graduation rate this year was one of the top 12 in the country according to the College Football Association. The addition of Rich Tuten to our strength program has enabled us to get much stronger than we were at this time last year. These things are a reflection of the attitude of our players which has just been outstanding.

Our staff has pretty much stayed intact so our coaches know more about each other. That's particularly true defensively where we had coaches who had not worked together previously. Now they've been together for a full year and have been able to work each other's defensive concepts into a philosophy for our team. We also know more about our players, both on and off the field. Obviously, we can adapt more to what they can do athletically.

We know more about the league than we did a year ago and we know better how competitive the Atlantic Coast Conference really is. And our players know more about the challenge they face in trying to win the ACC championship. Because of depth, inexperience and talent in certain areas, we're still a long way away from where we need to be in order to compete, year in and year out, for the conference championship as we once did. They understand there is work to be done and improvement to be made. But, they also understand we're heading in the right direction.

Q. How did spring practice go?

A. The thing that concerned us the most about the spring was something we couldn't control—the weather. This town is famous for having beautiful weather, but we had a very unusual spring in that regard. We practiced 85 percent of the time in the rain.

Our other major concern was the passing game. Working on that was difficult for our quarterbacks because they were throwing wet, heavy footballs most of the time. That was especially true for Jonathan Hall who has had a bad shoulder. Even though Jonathan is a senior, we're really inexperienced in the passing game since he hasn't thrown much in two years. This is an area that we really have to improve.

Complicating our passing situation was the fact Joey Jauch only practiced about three days in the spring because of an injury. So we only had two wide receivers, who will play a lot this fall, able to take part in the spring and work with our quarterbacks. We're bringing in four new receivers in our freshman class and, of course, Jauch is a red-shirt freshman. So we will actually have five new players working with our quarterbacks this fall. That's not a good situation for an area that was really a problem for us last year.

On the bright side, we stayed fairly healthy in the spring, avoiding major injuries. We were much stronger than in the past and that was a factor in cutting down on injuries. We didn't have a lot of depth, but guys fought through some minor injuries and stayed on the field.

We actually delayed the beginning of spring practice because of the weather. Still, we had to go more days in a shorter period of time than we would have liked. But, our guys had a great attitude and responded to that in good fashion. The spring game was in a cold, icy rain and we felt like they really competed against each other. We only practiced 19 days, but we felt like we got something accomplished on all 19.

This was a much more successful spring than a year ago because, while we had fewer people, we knew more about them. We worked in the direction of getting better, instead of evaluating so much as we had to do in 1988.

Q. Who impressed you in the spring?

A. Pat Crowley showed why he is one of the dominant linemen in our league and, I think, the country. He passed up wrestling last year so he could better condition himself for spring practice. He became a leader and did an outstanding job in the spring. Monk McDonald is one of the toughest graders on our coaching staff and he's never had a player grade out as well as Pat did in the spring.

I thought Jonathan Hall threw the ball more effectively in the spring than at any time last fall. He ran our football team and re-established himself as the starting quarterback. I think the fact he was finally able to lift weights in the off-season helped his shoulder strength. That was the first time he had been able to do that since his injury because of soreness in his shoulder. That shows how far away he was last fall when we were trying to play him some.

I liked the way Carl Watts came on in the spring. Carl played some in a starting role at guard last year. But, we moved him to center in the spring and he made an excellent transition. I was impressed with Kevin Donnalley, who came in after sitting out a transfer year from Davidson and established himself as a starting offensive tackle. Michael Benefield did the same thing at fullback. He was our most outstanding off-season player and then had a big spring.

Defensively, Cecil Gray stepped out in a leadership role which we definitely need. We moved Roy Barker to nose guard and he was a dominant force at that spot. We played three different nose guards last fall and felt we had to have someone step in there. He's done that. Dennis Tripp looked good at tackle. When we moved him from linebacker a year ago he weighed 231. Now he's at 258.

I thought Eric Gash was very consistent at outside linebacker. He's gained some weight and is stronger. Dwight Hollier has improved his strength and size and was an excellent linebacker in the spring. He weighed 212 pounds during last season, but had increased that to 226 by spring practice.

We moved Torin Dorn from tailback to cornerback and thought that was a very positive switch. Torin obviously lacks experience on defense. But he has the ability, if he does make a mistake, to overcome it and still make a play. Also, it appeared that Doxie Jordan, who was shifted to safety, was more comfortable there than he was at corner a year ago.

Q. How do you feel about the personnel moves you made in the off-season?

A. Most of those moves were made on defense where we must show the most improvement. I've been happy with all of those results.

We shifted Roy Barker from tackle to nose guard because we've got to stop people from running the ball up the middle against us and force them to throw the football or, hopefully, run sideways. We took a small tackle in Willie Joe Walker and moved him to outside linebacker. At 243 pounds, we feel that's where he needs to play and will be the most effective. We switched Doxie Jordan, who we thought was a good cornerback, to free safety where we think he can be an even better player. He was an outstanding player there in high school. We changed Reggie Clark, who had been a tailback and wide receiver, to strong safety. He seems more at home there and had a fine spring. Then in the most publicized switch, we moved Torin Dorn from tailback to cornerback. We had to get some speed at the outside positions to cover the great wide receivers we have in the ACC. Torin still has a lot to learn, but he showed in the spring he can be a very important player for us on defense. He has the talent to make the big play.

Q. What kind of player is Pat Crowley?

A. Pat is a very aggressive, intelligent and competitive football player who loves to dominate the line of scrimmage. Plus, he runs so well that he is a very forceful blocker on our sweep. Not only does he get the job done, but he can dominate people enough to actually put them on the ground and that's contagious with the young offensive linemen we have around him. He's a definite leader in the huddle. He's certainly one of the top linemen in our league and should be one of the best in the nation.

Q. What was the biggest difference between Jonathan Hall last season and this spring?

A. His arm strength. That allowed him to do some things in the passing game this spring to build his confidence. He realized that he could still run our football team, move the ball and score points like he did as a freshman and sophomore. The big thing with Jonathan last year was his shoulder was not conditioned to all the throwing he had to do. Then when we got behind in games, he had to play catch-up and throw even more. That simply put more pressure on the shoulder. That happened in the rain against Louisville, at Auburn, at Wake Forest and against N.C. State. By the State game he really didn't have any zip or strength in his arm.

Jonathan is a very intelligent young guy and he knew he wasn't throwing effectively. He couldn't fool himself. Because of that, he lost some of the confidence you need to run a football team. After he lost that confidence, he did a good job of helping Todd Burnett hang in there and learn some things. But, he was not a big factor at the end of the season. This spring he came back with his arm in better shape and re-established himself as the starter and had a lot more confidence in what he was doing.

Q. How good a player can Cecil Gray be?

A. Cecil is a guy who can be as good as anybody in the country if he realizes how much ability he really has. Because of his talent, he played as a freshman and wasn't red-shirted. He didn't play a lot in his first two years and then had some injuries in our first spring here. But, he came in last fall and played well for us. At times he was a dominant player. This spring he was dominant every day. That's the way we need him to play for us this fall and he's capable of doing it.

Q. How much progress has your defense made in the last year?

A. I think we've made a lot. We played very poorly in the fall. We've gotten better since then, but we're still not where we want to be and need to be. Depth is a major concern. If we get someone hurt, we're faced with playing guys who may be talented but have no experience. We could play some freshmen as backups in the secondary and that's not healthy in this league. And we're also very thin in the defensive line.

I do believe we have some talented young people on defense. I can see progress in a lot of individuals. They're bigger, stronger and more experienced than they were last season.

Q. What do you think are the strengths of this football team and what are your biggest concerns?

A. One of the things I feel best about is the attitude of our players. That has been exceptional. Our strength is better and our speed is going to be better. All that lends to our players having better self-images of themselves.

I'm concerned that we are so young and inexperienced. We're not very deep with only 80 scholarship players. Thus, we have to be careful in two-a-days that we do not take the spirit out of this team. It's going to be hot, but we need work and we need conditioning. But, the question for us as coaches, is how much can we get done with a very young squad that isn't used to the heat? We don't want to burn this team out before we even play a game.

Another concern is our passing game. We're going to be building that with a quarterback, Jonathan Hall, who hasn't played much in two years. Adding to the problem there is the fact he will be throwing to several receivers this year with whom he's never worked in the past.

Q. After going through a season here, what is your impression of ACC football?

A. I think ACC football is much better in both the level of its coaches and its players than people in other parts of the country might realize. It's much better than our reputation nationally. I know the coaches in our league, (ACC Commissioner) Gene Corrigan and our administrators are working toward getting ACC football the recognition it deserves.

Q. What surprised you most about your first season at Carolina?

A. After working in the Southeastern Conference and the Big Eight, I was surprised by the caliber of teams in the ACC. The teams are better and closer related in ability than I would have thought. When I was around this league at Appalachian State, there were a few dominant teams and the others struggled. Now the conference is much more competitive.

Q. What has impressed you most about Carolina in your year and a half here?

A. I think I'd have to touch on two things—first, the level of the academics at our institution and the prestige it has throughout America. If we talk to a young guy who is interested in a great education, by and large he's going to be interested in Carolina. That's very impressive to me. I thought that would be true when I came here, but it's even more so than I felt.

The other thing is the enthusiasm and attitude that our students and alumni have about Carolina. Some people who are not as excited about the University as I am, call it "arrogance." I think it's tremendous pride in our school. I've never seen it before, top to bottom, as I have at this institution.

Q. How good can the football program here really be?

A. Year in and year out, this program can be as good as any in America. Because of the nature of this school and my nature, we are going to build this program the right way. We are going to bring in students who are going to get their degrees and we are going to bring in people we think will be good representatives of our institution. We are going to look for classy and image-conscious young people. By doing that, it will take longer to be successful here than it might in a quick-fix type program. But, that's okay. We want nothing to do with quick fixes.

We feel like we can be as good as anybody in the country on a consistent basis. We've proven in the past we can have a great program—we've been in the top 10, we've won conference championships, we've been to 16 bowls. We've got a tremendous tradition. But, we have been inconsistent in that success. We've had highs and lows. There isn't any doubt in my mind that we are going to get our program back to where it has been. Then when we get it back, we want to be able to maintain it. That's what some other programs in the country have been able to do that we haven't been able to do at Carolina.

Q. Last year your team was honored by the College Football Association for graduating over 70 percent of its seniors. That's higher than the percentage of regular students who graduate. What was the key to that?

A. First, it's important that you bring in the right type people. Our admissions committee does a good job of looking at people to make sure they feel like they can get their degrees. A second point is that John Blanchard and his staff work very closely with our players through the arts and sciences program. We have unlimited tutoring and we've got one of the best academic support systems in the country. Our academic center has just about everything, even computer labs and foreign language labs. If a young person will come here with the proper attitude and go to class, we feel like he will get a degree from Carolina. That is the top priority in our program.

If a player has a class or a lab or a Saturday morning exam, that will take precedence over football practice, the game or anything else. We had a young guy last year who took a graduate record exam Saturday morning before our Wake Forest game in Winston-Salem.

We're working to get all of our guys to graduate in four years. Then they can go about their life if they would like or go to graduate school or have the option of playing a fifth year of football.

Q. You've made a special effort to get former players back on campus and to make them feel welcome when they come back. Why have you spent so much time on that?

A. As an ex-player myself, I've always appreciated it when Florida State has written me a letter. I've appreciated it when I've been invited back to functions even though I haven't been able to go in many cases because they're in the fall or during our spring practice.

The guys to whom we've written and talked have spent countless hours involved with football. They care about the University and have tried to present the proper image on and off the athletic field. This is a chance for us to say "Thank you" to guys, regardless of how much they played or whether they were stars or reserves. We want each player to know we appreciate the four or five years he put time and effort into helping us build the tradition we've got at Carolina.

And one of the great advantages we have at this school is tradition. Without that, we would have a lot less chance to be successful. You can't buy tradition, you build it. And these guys have built tradition here for 100 years and we'd like to say "Thank you" for that.

Q. Of your 24 incoming freshmen, 19 are from the Atlantic Coast Conference area. What caused you to concentrate so heavily on this area?

A. We want to find the best person, the best student and the best athlete that's suited to be at this institution. Since we first got here we've said we would start at home, in the state of North Carolina, and then branch out. A lot of times young people would rather stay in their own area if they can find what they want in a college. From our standpoint, there are a lot of outstanding high school players in this and surrounding states. I also believe that when a young guy is raised around the ACC, it will mean a whole lot more to him when he gets ready to compete in one of its games on Saturday. When he's back home in his community there will be a lot more pressure on him to excel because there is so much interest in ACC football.

Of course, we are going to recruit outside the ACC, also. We can do that because of Carolina's great national reputation. I think it's good for the squad to have guys from different parts of the country on it. But, we want the nucleus of our teams to be from our own geographic area.

Q. How would you rate high school football in the ACC area?

A. I think high school football here is very good. All you have to do is look at the large number of young people who sign college grants-in-aid each year from the states of Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland. That tells you they are being taught correctly. I've been very impressed with high school coaches in this area. They know what they are doing and want to do an even better job. The Greensboro coaches' clinic, for example, is one of the best in the country and is an indication to me that coaches here are constantly trying to improve.

Q. Last year eight true freshmen got playing time on your team. What is your feeling about red-shirting freshmen?

A. Last year eight was a lot more than we wanted to play. Because of our numbers and our needs, we were forced into playing some young men who probably weren't as ready as we would have liked for them to be. However, we feel that if a young freshman is ready emotionally, socially and academically, we'll give him a chance to play. Obviously, he's ready physically or we wouldn't even be looking at the other factors. But, you can put yourself in a tough spot by playing too many freshmen. You're better off with an older guy helping a freshman emotionally during a ballgame than having two freshmen side-by-side experiencing college football for the first time.

Q. You've talked about the great academic reputation this school has. Yet, in a USA TODAY poll last November, Carolina was tied with Auburn and Notre Dame for having the 10th most players in the National Football League. How has this school been able to fit academics and athletics together so well?

A. I think the University of North Carolina has as fine a balance between academics and athletics as anyone in the country. Chapel Hill is a unique college town and the University is great place to go to school for a number of reasons. It is one of the best academic schools in the country. All the national surveys show that and securing a quality education should be the major reason anyone goes to college. But, people here are also interested in athletics. The key is to keep athletics in the proper perspective in the University setting and that's been done at Carolina. I think keeping the proper perspective is one way Carolina has been able to maintain such a great balance between the two. Another factor is this school tries to be the very best it can in everything it does. The idea is to excel in everthing and that means athletics as well as academics. That's tough to accomplish and Carolina is one of the few schools able to do it.

Q. You mentioned Rich Tuten earlier. How did your off-season conditioning program go under him?

A. Things went very well. Last year Rich got here in the first part of July and it was too late to do anything except probably get the players good and sore for two-a-days. He really got his program going after the season while the coaches were recruiting in December, January and February. In fact, the Monday after the Duke game last fall our team started running and lifting again. We're definitely stronger and faster than we were last year and that's a credit to Rich and his staff.

Q. Many coaches operate behind closed doors. Why do you have open practices?

A. We have open practices because we feel like we're doing things right, treating young people properly. Especially in a rebuilding program, I think it's important for our alumni and members of the media to come and see that our coaches are doing a good job of communicating with players, that they know what they're talking about, that they're teaching the proper techniques, that we're doing the right drills. It will help our program in the long run.

Q. How would you sum up your basic coaching philosophy?

A. There are several aspects to our staff's philosophy. We would like to recruit classy young people who would like to come to the University to get a degree. We want them to have enough ability for us to not only win the ACC championship, but also to play in a January 1 bowl and compete for a national championship.

We want to feel like we are giving young people more than just a scholarship and more than just a chance to compete in football. We want to make sure that when they leave us they have a better chance, in our minds, to walk into a competitive society and make a living. Hopefully, some of the values they have learned here would help them do that. Football is a good teacher and you do learn values from it. However, we want to give them something beyond football. We hear so much that football and life are just alike and that success in one leads to success in the other.

Well, that just isn't true. There are a lot of football players who haven't made it in life. That's why we want to go beyond the game itself. That's why we have special seminars for our players on different subjects, that's why we have the proper counseling we have, that's why we have career planning and placement.

So, in a nutshell, our philosophy is to get the right guy here, teach him certain values and let him try to have some fun while he's learning them. But, we definitely want to win football games. That success will give him confidence and make it easier for him to find a place for himself in society after graduation.

15 Todd Burnett

Quarterback
6-6, 192, Sophomore
Burke, Va.

Started the last five games of the 1988 season at quarterback...Coaches had hoped to red-shirt him, but changed their plans when the offense sputtered at mid-season...With the Tar Heels needing an offensive lift, he was inserted into the lineup in hopes he could provide a spark...Was the first true freshman to start a game at quarterback for Carolina since Jonathan Hall opened against Clemson in 1985...The first true freshman to start the first game in which he played since frosh became eligible in 1972...Like Hall, he helped engineer a big win in his initial start...Completed 13 of 22 passes for 130 yards in a 20-17 victory over Georgia Tech...Made mistakes in that game, but showed a lot of poise...Had five completions on third-and-long to keep drives going...After throwing an interception which was returned for a touchdown by Tech's George Malone, he completed eight of his next 10 passes...Was five-for-five in the air during the Tar Heels' two second half touchdown drives...Hit 10 of 20 passes the following week against Maryland in a narrow 41-38 loss...Passed for 117 yards in that game...Was 11 for 23 at Clemson for 82 yards...That included a 23-yard touchdown pass to John Keller...Got off to a slow start against Virginia, hitting just three of eight first half passes for 12 yards...However, completed his first six of the second half and nine of his first 10...Finished the day with 15 completions in 23 attempts for 146 yards and two TDs...The scores were 26 and 16-yard passes to Randy Marriott as Carolina roared from a 21-0 first quarter deficit to tie the game at 24 in the fourth period...The Cavaliers came back to win with a late field goal when the Tar Heels couldn't score on their last two possessions...Burnett's 15 completions that day were the most ever by a Carolina freshman...Previous single-game high had been 14 by Chuck Sharpe against Wake Forest in 1978 and by Hall against Duke in 1985...Burnett was only three-for-nine throwing in the season finale at Duke...Did not see as much action as in previous weeks as the Tar Heels were having good success with Hall handling the running game...Burnett finished the year with 52 completions out of 97 attempts for 497 yards and three touchdowns...Threw five interceptions...Passing percentage was .536...Was the first freshman to lead the team in completions since Matt Kupec in 1976...Made some big plays during his freshman season, but lacked consistency...That was to be expected of a first-year player...Really played before he was ready to face college competition...Did a fine job under the circumstances...Did not have a total grasp of the offense as he had seen only limited practice time prior to the week of his first start...Knew what he was doing, but not always why he was doing it.

Started off spring practice by pressing too much...Began to come on and show progress in the latter stages of the spring work...Needs to work on his flexibility...That will help his mobility...An accurate passer who will improve as he gets a better feel for the offense...A much better short and intermediate passer than a deep one...Needs to work on that...Has the work habits to do that in the summer on his own...Goes into the fall behind Hall at quarterback on the depth chart...Was an all-region and all-district quarterback at Lake Braddock High School...Second-team all-metro selection by the WASHINGTON POST...Named the region's co-offensive player of the year...Passed for 1,700 yards and 17 touchdowns as a senior...Had five TD passes in one game and a high of 270 yards passing in a game...Team's most valuable player...Named to the ROANOKE TIMES Top 25 in Virginia...Coached by Joe Clark...One of his wide receivers was Hubert Davis, an all-state selection who is on a basketball scholarship at Carolina...Also lettered in track...A General College student at Carolina...Born February 19, 1970.

Was sensational in spring practice...Made tremendous strides at left cornerback and is slated to start there this fall...Got his feet wet on defense in the spring...Developed a good knowledge of the Tar Heel defensive system quickly, but still has a lot to learn...However, is extremely poised and has great self-confidence ...Gives Carolina much-needed speed in the secondary...Has great acceleration and surprised many with his hitting ability in the spring...Simply possesses a lot of athletic skills...Had shown great potential as a tailback, but has been hampered by injuries throughout his career...Coaches hope the shift to defense will alleviate that injury problem...The switch was made by mutual agreement of Dorn and Coach Mack Brown...Being counted on as one of the defensive leaders in his first year on that side of the ball.

Jonathan Hall

Quarterback
6-0½, 191, Senior
Vienna, Va.

Here's the Carolina quarterback... Won the job with a fine showing in spring practice...Came back to play last fall after missing the entire 1987 season...Major shoulder surgery that August put him on the sidelines...Played last year although he couldn't throw as well as he once could...His shoulder wasn't strong enough to pass as well as needed, but the team needed his leadership...Lifted weights in the off-season, the first time he was able to do that in two years...Saw improvement in his arm strength last spring because of that six-to-seven week period of lifting...Was stronger and more accurate...Was much better in the short and intermediate passing game...Still needs more strength for deep passing...That could come with weight work over the summer...Seemed to get the confidence back in the spring that may have been shaken last fall...Played in eight of 11 games last season...Completed 51 of 129 passes, a percentage of .395...Threw for 675 yards and four touchdowns with six interceptions...Ran 50 times for 145 yards (2.9 per rush)...His arm got sore at times last fall because he had not thrown for such a long time due to his injury...Started games against Louisville, Auburn, Wake Forest and N.C. State...Best throwing performance was at Wake...Established personal career highs that night with 36 attempts, 19 completions, 258 yards passing and 281 yards of total offense...His 258 yards in the air was the 13th-highest single-game total in school history...The 36 attempts were the 12th most ever by a Tar Heel player...The 19 completions equalled the 11th-highest figure ever at Carolina...The 281 yards of total offense ranks as the 18th best at UNC...Had five and six-yard touchdown passes against the Deacs...Other TD tosses covered 36 yards to Randy Marriott against Louisville and 24 yards to Reggie Clark at Auburn...Had a career-high 84 yards rushing on 13 attempts in the Louisville game...That was the most by a Tar Heel quarterback since Chuck Sharpe had 100 against Virginia in 1978...Scored three times against the Cardinals on runs of 39, eight and three yards...Became the first Carolina quarterback to score three touchdowns in a game since World War II...Records make it difficult to establish positions of players prior to that, but none have done it since then except Hall.

His shoulder was originally injured late in the 1986 Aloha Bowl...Surgery was performed to correct a separation, but the shoulder continued to slide out of its socket...He was then sent to Dr. Frank Jobe, the noted shoulder specialist...Jobe repaired the shoulder much as he had done with Chicago Bear quarterback Jim McMahon, who had a similar problem...That operation came in August, 1987...Hall experienced further discomfort the following spring when he tried to throw...An arthroscopy was performed in Chapel Hill at that time and a fibrous band was removed which had been impeding the movement of a tendon...Hall then began throwing in June in an effort to prepare for the 1988 season...With a completely healthy arm, he can be an outstanding quarterback...At less than 100 percent, he still has enough determination and desire to be a very good one...Very confident in his own ability and is devoted to the game...Much of his success as a quarterback has come because of his self-confidence...Has a knack for instilling that confidence in others...Carolina's young offense needs that kind of confidence and leadership...Has a lot of savvy and experience...Wants the ball when the game is on the line...Although he had developed into a good drop-back passer before his injury, he's actually been at his best when he's been out of the pocket and on the run...Has good speed for a quarterback and the ability to make things happen...Possesses the most mobility of any returning Tar Heel quarterback...A streaky player in the past who has been brilliant when he's been hot...Intelligent and a hard worker, he wants to be a coach.

Was the starting quarterback in Carolina's first five games of 1986...Suffered a sprained knee late in the fifth game at Wake Forest...That sidelined him, allowing Mark Maye to take over the signal-calling duties...Had played the finest game of his career against the Deacons before getting hurt...Completed 12 of 22 passes that day for 163 yards and four touchdowns, all in the first half ...The four TD passes were the most of the entire Atlantic Coast Conference season...Had also thrown one scoring pass in each of the season's first four games...Was the second-ranked passer in the ACC at the time of his injury...Was leading the league in both lowest interception percentage and highest touchdown percentage at that time...In addition, Carolina was 4-0-1 in his five starts...Finished the year playing behind Maye, who had a great second half himself...Threw only two passes after his injury, both at Clemson...Hit on 43 of 88 passes for 616 yards, eight touchdowns and three interceptions...Longest play was a 55-yard TD pass to William Humes at Kansas...Had become the Tar Heels' starting quarterback in the latter stages of the 1985 season...Played in just three of Carolina's first seven games that year as a true freshman, seeing spot action...Then played the entire second half of a loss at Maryland...Started the final three games...Completed 38 of 79 passes for 559 yards and four touchdowns...Scored once himself on a four-yard run against Duke...Became the first true freshman to start a game at quarterback for the Tar Heels since Chuck Sharpe in 1978...Turned in a sensational performance in his first collegiate start...Completed 12 of 20 passes for 182 yards and one touchdown as Carolina came from behind to defeat Clemson, 21-20...Directed 80 and 70-yard scoring drives in the fourth quarter, hitting seven of eight passes...Made an outstanding play in the first drive when he eluded a heavy pass rush on third-and-nine to fire a 17-yard pass to Quinton Smith...That march culminated in a three-yard Hall-to-Arnold Franklin touchdown pass...Hall then took the Tar Heels 70 yards, the winning touchdown coming with just 10 seconds on the clock...ACC Rookie of the Week for that performance...Completed 14 of 26 passes for 242 yards and two touchdowns in the season finale against Duke...The 242 yards is the most ever by a Carolina freshman and the 18th-highest total among all UNC players...Heads into his final year with 132 career completions out of 296 attempts...That ties him with Gary Black for 14th place on the school's all-time passing list...Ranks 11th in career touchdown passes with 16.

Quarterbacked James Madison High School to an 8-2 record in 1984...Completed 77 of 152 passes for 1,255 yards and 17 touchdowns...Gained 609 yards rushing on 82 carries, averaging 7.4 yards an attempt...Scored six touchdowns himself...All-Northern Region and all-district choice...Picked to the ROANOKE TIMES Top 25 in Virginia...Chosen for the East-West All-Star Game...Named his team's MVP...Coached by Chuck Sell...Won two letters in football and two in baseball...His brother, David, is a former running back at Virginia...Another brother, Joey, was a linebacker at Western Kentucky...Majoring in Political Science...Was named to the ACC All-Academic Football Team last fall...Born March 28, 1967.

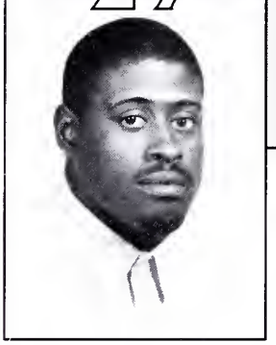
29 Kennard Martin



Tailback
5-10, 200, Junior
Winston-Salem, N.C.

The biggest question mark on the Carolina team...Had a sensational sophomore season last fall, but his status for the upcoming year is unknown...Was suspended by Coach Mack Brown from the squad on April 27...A decision on whether he will be able to rejoin the team probably won't be made until at least August...If he doesn't return, his loss would be a major blow to the Tar Heel offense...Established himself last year as one of the premier runners in college football...Rushed for 1,146 yards on 193 carries, averaging 5.9 yards an attempt...Scored 11 touchdowns, all on the ground...Also caught 11 passes for 36 yards...Became the 19th Carolina back to rush for 1,000 yards...That's the most 1,000-yard rushers of any school in the country...Led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rushing, averaging 104.2 yards a game...Became the 10th UNC player to win the league rushing title...Was the 14th-leading rusher in the country...His 5.9 yards-per-rush average was the best among the ACC's regular runners...Of the 13 players ranked ahead of him nationally in rushing, only four bettered his 5.9 mark...His 11 touchdowns were the most in the ACC by a running back and tied Wake Forest wide receiver Ricky Proehl for the most by any league player...The 1,146 yards was the seventh-best single-season figure in school history...With 66 points he became the first running back to lead the Tar Heels in scoring since Kelvin Bryant had 18 touchdowns for 108 points in 1981...His 1,146 yards also made him the first running back to top the team in total offense since Amos Lawrence had 1,118 in 1980...Was eighth in the ACC in total offense and fourth in all-purpose running...Compiled all the yardage although he actually shared the tailback position with Torin Dorn most of the season...Started just six games...Played as the backup early in the year, but got more playing time after Dorn was slowed by an injury...Had 1,119 yards in his last nine games—an average of 124.3 per game...Was brilliant in the season finale at Duke...Ripped the Blue Devil defense for 291 yards on 39 carries...That was the second-best rushing performance in ACC history, topped only by the 328 yards Carolina's Derrick Fenner had against Virginia in 1986...Had 175 yards rushing in the first half of that game, equalling the school record for rushing yards in a half set by Amos Lawrence at Virginia in 1977...The 291 yards is the 12th-highest total offense figure in school history...Scored touchdowns that day on four and 16-yard runs and set up another with a tackle-busting 39-yard gallop...His 39 carries equalled the fourth most in school history for a single game...Was the only player all season to gain 100 yards on Clemson's tough defense...Got 116 yards against the Tigers on just 16 carries...That included a 37-yard touchdown run...Ran for 177 yards against Maryland on 28 carries and scored three touchdowns...Those scores covered 28, two and 13 yards...That was the most rushing yardage ever compiled by a Tar Heel player against the Terps...Missed over a quarter of the Virginia game with an injury, but still gained 98 yards on 21 carries...Was dynamic in an early-season game with Louisville...Came off the bench to run for 160 yards on just 14 carries...Averaged 11.4 yards an attempt in that game...Had a 46-yard run against the Cardinals, his longest of the season...Also had a 37-yard touchdown run in that game...Scored twice on short runs against an Auburn defense which gave up the fewest points in the nation all year (79)...Gained 71 yards on 15 carries in that game with the Tigers...At the end of the year he owned three of the top four rushing days in the league...Tied center Jeff Garnica in voting for team MVP and also was named the Tar Heels' top offensive back...All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection...Now ranks 17th in career rushing at Carolina with 1,245 yards on 225 carries...Ed Sutton is 16th with 1,334...His career mark of 5.53 yards per rush is the third best of the top 20 career rushers...Only Tar Heel players with better marks are Sutton at 6.9 (193 carries) and Fenner at 5.6 (292 carries).

Put together his big sophomore season after a disappointing freshman year...Played as a backup in the first two games that year before starting at Georgia Tech...Turned in his top performance there with 41 yards on nine carries, three receptions and 85 yards on four kickoff returns...However, suffered a strained knee and a pulled hamstring in the fourth quarter...Missed the following two games against Navy and Auburn...Returned to action against Wake Forest, but saw only spot duty...During the next week was suspended from the team for the remainder of the season by Dick Crum, then the Tar Heel coach, for disciplinary reasons...Got a chance to rejoin the team during the spring of 1988...Took advantage of that to play so well last fall...But, his new problems put his career in jeopardy...Possesses game-breaking capabilities...A fine natural runner...Has a great knack for breaking tackles and keeping his feet...A lot of his yardage last year came after being initially hit by a defender...However, he's shifty and fast enough to avoid tacklers, too...Always gives 100 percent on the practice field...Came to Carolina in 1986 and was red-shirted...Set a dozen rushing, scoring and total offense records at Parkland High School ...Ran for 2,105 yards as a senior...Averaged 8.2 yards a rush and scored 25 touchdowns...Also scored 10 times on two-point conversions...Led the Mustangs to an 11-2 record and a spot in the state playoffs...Gained 203 yards and scored three TDs in the playoff opener...Rushed for 172 yards and scored four times in the second round...Conference, Piedmont and City-County Player of the Year...Associated Press and GREENSBORO NEWS & RECORD all-state selection...Chosen to the DURHAM MORNING HERALD Sweet 16, the RALEIGH NEWS & OBSERVER Top Five in North Carolina and the RALEIGH TIMES Top 25...Rushed for 1,239 yards as a sophomore and 910 as a junior for a career total of 4,254...Had 495 career carries for an average of 8.6 yards a rush...Scored 47 touchdowns and 302 points...Coached by Homer Thompson...Also lettered in track...Majoring in Industrial Relations...Born June 10, 1968.

Lexington, N.C.

Moved to tight end following the conclusion of spring practice...Has been a quarterback throughout his career...However, Carolina also had veteran Jonathan Hall and soph Todd Burnett at that spot...It was felt May had the overall athletic skills needed to play another position...Help was needed at tight end with the top two players there last year both graduated...That resulted in the shift...Has good size, toughness, speed and strength...As a quarterback he could not work as much in the weight room as he will now be able to do...Strength thus should increase...Could be a very important player in Tar Heel offensive plans...Has that kind of athletic ability...Obviously lacks experience at the new position, but does have valuable game experience...Started the first game of his college career last fall...Opened at quarterback at South Carolina...Was the first Carolina quarterback to start his initial game since Bernie Menapace in 1976...Completed 13 of 34 passes that night for 121 yards...Had a net three yards rushing on three carries...His 124 yards of total offense was the most ever by a Tar Heel player in a career debut ...The previous record of 114 yards had been set by Charlie Justice in 1946...Also started the second game against Oklahoma...Completed 10 of 21 passes against the Sooners for 105 yards...Other playing time came against Auburn, N.C. Tar Heelia

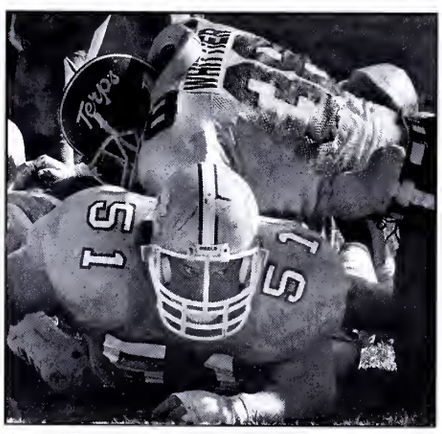
Academic All-Americas
Carolina's most recent is quarterback Kevin Anthony, a first-team selection in 1985. A complete list of Tar Heels who have won this honor is located on page 116 of this brochure.

Accommodations
There are numerous hotels and motels in the Chapel Hill, Durham and Research Triangle Park areas. However, on the weekend of a big game, space can be tight. Members of the media unable to make reservations of their own should contact the Carolina Sports Information Office (919) 962-2123. Magic can sometimes be worked there.

Advertisements
We don't have them. Unlike many college football scoreboards that are covered by ads, there are none in Kenan Stadium. There is a lot of money that could be made by utilizing such ads and college athletic programs are always looking for new sources of income. But, Carolina is one institution that has refused to commercialize itself. In addition, such ads, which are fine in many places, would take away from the natural beauty of this particular stadium.

All-Americas
Twenty-two Carolina football players have received first-team All-America honors with numerous others gaining second and third-team recognition. The first-team selections stretch from guard George Barclay in 1934 to tackle Harris Barton in 1986 and include five players who were so honored in two different seasons: end Paul Severin in 1939 and 1940, halfback Charle Justice in 1948 and 1949, end Art Weiner in 1948 and 1949, offensive guard David Drechsler in 1981 and 1982 and defensive tackle William Fuller in 1982 and 1983. More All-America data is available on pages 115-117.

All-Star Candidates



Guard Pat Crowley, blasting a hole on the goal line, ranks as a prime All-America candidate.

While Carolina has a number of players with the potential to be outstanding players, some have already attracted attention from the national and regional media in pre-season magazines and stories. This group includes offensive guard Pat Crowley, defensive tackle Cecil Gray, linebacker Dwight Hollier and tailback Kennard Martin. Crowley, in fact, has made all of the pre-season All-America lists and ranks as one of the nation's premier players. Although he has no experience on defense, Torin Dorn has the natural ability to emerge as an all-star contender in the secondary.

Alumni
As of June 1, there were 177,000 living Carolina alumni. Of that total, 53 percent live in the state of North Carolina. But, alumni reside in all 50 states and 125 foreign countries. One half of the undergraduate degrees have been awarded in the last 17 years.

Alumni Association
It's located in the Alumni House, next to the Carolina Inn, and is headed by Doug Dibbert, director of alumni affairs, and Bo Dunlap, assistant director. They can he reached at (919) 962-1208.

Announcer
Field announcer at Kenan Stadium is Kearney Andrews of Lexington, N.C.

Atlantic Coast Conference
Carolina was a charter member of the Atlantic Coast Conference when it was formed in 1953. Other current members of the league are Clemson, Duke, Georgia Tech, Maryland, N.C. State, Virginia and Wake Forest. The league offices are located in Greensboro, N.C. Gene Corrigan is the conference commissioner and Tom Mickle serves as assistant commissioner and director of the service bureau.

Bainbridge
When Charlie Justice signed up to enlist in World War II, he was asked which branch of the service he preferred. He told the draft board that since he couldn't swim, he should be in the army. Justice, of course, was immediately put in the navy and sent to Bainbridge Naval Training Station in Maryland. Each base fielded its own football team. Although lined up against college and professional stars, Justice just out of high school, was an immediate sensation. Bainbridge went undefeated in 1943 and was ranked the number one service team in the country.

It was at Bainbridge that Charlie got his nickname. An observer commented, while watching him play, "Say, that Justice kid runs like a choo choo train." The tag stuck and Charlie Justice became interchangeable with Choo Choo Justice. Charlie spent two seasons at Bainbridge before being shipped to Hawaii. He played there for the Pearl Harbor Navy All-Stars.

Barclay, George
Carolina's first football All-America in 1934. Barclay played offensive guard and linebacker. He was named captain of the 1934 team which went 7-1-1. Barclay later served as Carolina's head coach from 1953 to 1955.

Beat Dook Parade
This is an annual parade held before the big game with Duke each football season. It features floats put together by various residence colleges, fraternities and sororities.

Blanchard, Felix (Doc)
The great Army All-America fullback who actually began his college football career at Carolina. He enrolled at Chapel Hill in 1941. But, because of the war, the army took him away. He was enrolled at West Point where he became a three-time All-America and part of the famed Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside tandem with Glenn Davis. Blanchard won the Heisman Trophy in 1945.

Blanchard's son, Tony, was a star tight end at Carolina from 1968 to 1970 and still ranks as the 12th-leading receiver in school history.

Bowl Games
Carolina has gone bowling 16 times with 12 of those appearances coming in the last 19 years. The all-time Tar Heel bowl record is 6-10. Carolina's post-season trips have been to the Sugar Bowl in 1947 and 1949; the Cotton Bowl in 1950; the Gator Bowl in 1963, 1971, 1979 and 1981; the Peach Bowl in 1970, 1976 and 1983; the Sun Bowl in 1972, 1974 and 1982; the Liberty Bowl in 1977; the Bluebonnet Bowl in 1980; and the Aloha Bowl in 1986.

More information on these games can be found in the records section of this brochure.

Cancelled Games
Carolina only played eight games during the 1952 season. Early-season contests against N.C. State and Georgia had to be cancelled because of a polio outbreak on campus.

Captains
Carolina's captains for this fall will be chosen during pre-season workouts. Tar Heel players will vote for captains following the conclusion of two-a-day drills.

Carolina Blue
The light blue color worn by Carolina athletic teams. It has many different names—light blue, powder blue, sky blue and Columbia Blue among others. However, the accomplishments of Tar Heel athletes have really made the color synonimous with the University so it simply bears its name.

This is also the name of a newspaper which covers Carolina athletics.

Carolina Cheerios
This is the most famous cheering section in Carolina history. It was organized in 1927 by Kay Kyser, the Tar Heel head cheerleader. The Cheerios, which included a chorus and dance group, was made up of 300 students dressed in blue coats and white trousers.

In his time in Chapel Hill, Kyser also wrote a new fight song, "Tar Heels On Hand." He was a hustler who kept things hopping in the stands even if they were dragging on the field. Kyser was a natural showman so it was no surprise when he made it big in show business. His bands were world-famous. His "College of Musical Knowledge" was one of the most popular of all radio shows. He made movies and The New York Times called him "The Genius of Jazz." But, in Chapel Hill, he is still best known for the Cheerios.

Chapel Hill
Home of the University of North Carolina, the town traces its history back to 1792 when it was known as New Hope Chapel Hill. It was named for New Hope Chapel, a church located atop a hill.

Today, the town has about 36,000 permanent residents. However, when the University is in session, the population goes above 65,000. Because of the University's presence, the town is like a cosmopolitan city, but it still maintains the charm of a village.

Chapel Hill was rated the third best place to live nationally out of 329 metro areas surveyed in the 1985 Places Rated Almanac, published by Rand McNally. It is part of an urban region known as the Research Triangle. Time Magazine named this area "one of the 20 nicest places to live in the United States." It was also rated in two other recent surveys as being among the five best places to live in America.

Cheerleaders
Tar Heel cheerleaders for the 1989-90 school year will be chosen in August. The squad of eight men and eight women will come from a group that includes Lisa Alberts of Madrid, Spain; Brad Armstrong of Normal, Ill.; Julie Brogan of Marietta, Ga.; Chris Chalfant of Concord, N.C.; Jill Currin of Spring Lake, N.C.; Lance Davis of Greensboro, N.C.; Renee Davis of Gastonia, N.C.; Marc Finch of Raleigh, N.C.; Jeff Johns of Charlotte, N.C.; Susan Kerr of Raleigh, N.C.; Mike Lee of Wilmington, N.C.; Mike Little of Winston-Salem, N.C.; Shannon MacFadyen of Raleigh, N.C.; Tres Magner of Raleigh, N.C.; Kelley O'Donnell of Charlotte, N.C.; Jeff Parkman of Raleigh, N.C.; Shea Roberts of Durham, N.C.; Donna Sigmon of Claremont, N.C., Brian Stalder of Fayetteville, N.C.; and Jeff Varner of Greensboro, N.C.

Cheerleading
None allowed in the press box.

Coeds
There are plenty of them in Chapel Hill. In fact, there are many more women students at Carolina than there are men. But, that has not always been the case.

Women first registered for admission to Carolina in 1896. They were required to be Chapel Hill residents and were admitted only as graduate students or upper level transfers. Five coeds registered, the first being Mary S. MacRae, daughter of the law school dean. Of the five, Sally Walker Stockard received the first earned degree in 1898.

The first women freshmen were admitted in 1917.

In 1925 admission was revoked except in pre-medicine, pharmacy and chemistry. Regulations regarding the admission of coeds changed several times during the next 40 years.

In 1965 women were first accepted as freshmen without the special restrictions of being a Chapel Hill resident; living with their parents or husbands; or planning to study in the following areas: art, music, dramatic art or dental hygiene and, for North Carolina residents only—medical technology, nursing, pharmacy or physical therapy. However, the number of women was kept to a minimum because of limited dormitory space.

All restrictions were lifted and women had as much of a chance as men of getting into Carolina in 1972. An equal percentage of men and women were admitted in 1975. Last spring the campus was 57 percent female and 43 percent male.

Davie, William R.

"The Father of the University," a revolutionary patriot, a governor of North Carolina and the recipient of the University's first honorary doctor of laws degree. A graduate of Princeton, Davie was a cavalry officer in the Revolutionary War and a delegate to the Philadelphia Constitutional Convention in 1787.

Davie persuaded this state's new legislature to charter the University, the first state institution in the country. Ratification occurred just 20 days after North Carolina ratified the U.S. Constitution. Only days after the University was chartered, a bill was introduced to provide building fund and support for the school through escheats and tax exemptions. Davie prepared the ordinance fixing the seat of the University and played a leading role in the construction of buildings and the selection of the faculty. Davie steered a building loan through the General Assembly in December of 1791 which was the only state appropriation for the University until after the Civil War.

Davie, as grand master of masons, laid the cornerstone to Old East, now the oldest state university building in the nation, on October 12, 1793.

The only major college player other than Carolina's Amos Lawrence to rush for 1,000 yards in four straight seasons. Lawrence gained 1,211 yards in 1977, had 1,043 in 1978, ran for 1,019 in 1979 and then had 1,118 in 1980.

Duke

Alma mater of Carolina Chancellor Paul Hardin. It is situated just eight miles from Chapel Hill, near enough so its students can come to Carolina and have a good time. This is the school where Lefty Driesell was taught English and Richard Nixon studied law. Trails Carolina in the all-time football series, 38-33-4.

Durham, Woody

Now in his 19th year of handling radio play-by-play commentary for the North Carolina Tar Heels. Durham, a 1963 Carolina graduate, has the most recognizable voice in the entire state as Tar Heel games can be heard anywhere in North Carolina. He's famous for his meticulous preparation for every broadcast. Durham is vice-president and executive sports director of the Village Companies in Chapel Hill, loves to play golf and has been voted North Carolina sportscaster of the year so many times the award may be retired.

Equipment Room

Carolina's football equipment room is managed by Dominic Morelli.

Facilities

Carolina's are among the best in the country and getting better all the time. The Student-Athlete Development Center at Kenan Stadium features the best equipment available to help young people with their studies and a weight room that is second to none on a college campus. The Tar Heel football locker room was renovated in the spring of 1988 and a football lettermen's lounge has been added to the main concourse of the stadium.

Much of the credit for all this should go to Paul Hoolahan, associate athletic director at Carolina, who oversaw these major projects. However, he would prefer to get the credit for helping Don McCauley break O.J. Simpson's NCAA rushing record in 1970 when he was an All-Atlantic Coast Conference tackle.

First Game

Carolina's first football game was played against Wake Forest on October 18, 1888. The site was the State Fair in Raleigh.

The University was represented by a team of sophomores who had defeated the rest of the student body and was looking for new opposition. A game with Wake Forest sophomores was arranged. The rules of "foot ball" were vastly different than they are now. In fact, there were very few rules at all. However, according to THE NEWS AND OBSERVER of Raleigh, "the game was exciting and was played by excellent teams on both sides. It was witnessed by a tremendous crowd. The players were uniformed and were a skilled and active set of boys."

Each goal counted two points and Wake won the game, 6-4. This was the first intercollegiate game of "foot ball" played in the state of North Carolina.

Forward Pass

Carolina has been given credit for throwing the first forward pass in the game. The immortal John Heisman is the man who gave that distinction to the Tar Heels in a 1928 edition of Collier's Weekly. Heisman had witnessed the event in a Carolina-Georgia game played in Atlanta on October 26, 1895. More information on the play is available on page 133 of this brochure.

Franklin Street

Most famous street in North Carolina. It's the main thoroughfare through downtown Chapel Hill. However, there are other streets and roads in this college town with famous names. Among them are Justice, Weiner, Barclay, Severin, Branch, Fetzer and Hartig. All were named for important figures in Carolina's football history.

General College

All freshmen and sophomores are enrolled in the University's General College and must complete 13 to 14 general education courses along with about seven free electives. The general education courses reflect the faculty's thoughts on what students will need to lead productive and meaningful lives. These courses are in English, mathematics, the sciences, history and foreign language. They provide the foundation for balanced development and are taken by all students, regardless of intended fields of study.

Also, the General College provides students with a chance to explore different areas of interest and to recognize personal strengths and weaknesses while selecting a major field of study and preparing for a lifetime of learning.

The General College features extensive guidance and personal counseling to students. Each student receives personal assistance and encouragement in selecting courses and maintaining scholastic standards from an adviser, a regular, full-time member of the University faculty.

The Gray Fox

One of the many nicknames given former Carolina Coach Carl Snavely. He was also King Carl, The Dutch Master and Mr. Single Wingback.

Snavely directed Carolina to its greatest heights in football, taking the Tar Heels to three major bowl games during the Charlie Justice Era in the late 1940's.

A quiet man on and off the field, Snavely was a perfectionist who rarely passed out compliments. In fact, it was not until after Justice graduated that Snavely finally admitted Charlie was the best player he had coached.

Snavely was a pioneer in the use of films in football. He watched game films day and night, at his office and at home. His only vice was ice cream. Late-night visitors to his home would often find him with a quart of ice cream in his lap and his black german sheperd Barnaby at his side, watching films of the previous game.

In 32 seasons of collegiate coaching at Carolina, Bucknell, Cornell and Washington University in St. Louis, he compiled a brilliant 180-96-16 record. He is a member of the National Football Hall of Fame.

Hark The Sound (alma mater)

Hark the sound of Tar Heel voices
Ringing clear and free
Singing Carolina's praises
Shouting UNC
Hail to the brightest star of all
Clear its radiance shine
Carolina priceless gem
Receive all praises thine.

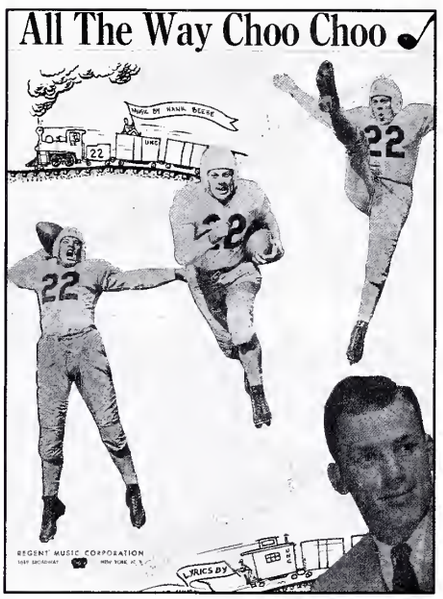
Chorus
I'm a Tar Heel born
I'm a Tar Heel bred
And when I die
I'm a Tar Heel dead.
So it's RAH, RAH
Car'lin-a lin-a
RAH, RAH, Car'lin-a lin-a
RAH, RAH, Car'lin-a
RAH! RAH! RAH!

Homecoming

Every football weekend is a good one to be in Chapel Hill, but Homecoming has always been special to many alumni. Reunions are often planned around this date.

Homecoming this fall will be September 30 when the Tar Heels face Navy. Kickoff time is 4 p.m. Students will hold the annual Homecoming parade on the morning of the game. This march through campus has occurred on Friday afternoons in the past. However, it was moved to Saturday last year so more returning alumni and fans could watch it.

Justice, Charlie



The most famous of all Carolina football players, Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice is regarded by many as the greatest all-around player in the history of the South. Justice, a triple-threat tailback from a single-wing formation, starred on Tar Heel teams from 1946 to 1949. He helped spark Carolina to two Sugar Bowl appearances and one trip to the Cotton Bowl. He still holds many school total offense and punting records.

Justice was the subject of a book, "Choo Choo, the Charlie Justice Story," by Bob Quincy and Julian Scheer and of a song, "All The Way Choo Choo," by Orville Campbell and Hank Bebee. Charlie and his wife, Sarah, now live in Cherryville, N.C., but he is a frequent visitor to Chapel Hill. A profile on Justice can be found on pages 118 and 119 of this publication.

Kenan Stadium

Home of Carolina's Tar Heels and called by Inside Sports magazine one of the five best places in the country to watch a college game. Capacity at the stadium was increased to 52,000 last year with the addition of 2,000 new seats in a prime location—between the 40-yard lines on each side of the field. Room was made for the additional seats by the destruction of the old press box and chancellor's box. A new press box was added to the top of the stadium's south side. Surrounded by trees, the stadium is in a natural valley and a beautiful setting. More information on Kenan can be found on pages 64 and 65 of this brochure.

Kenan, William Rand, Jr.

Benefactor of Kenan Stadium. A native of Wilmington, N.C., Kenan was an 1894 Carolina graduate who lettered in both football and baseball. During his work on campus, he discovered carbide, laying a foundation for success in chemistry, engineering and building. His skill as an engineer and his ability as a director of great enterprises put him in demand all over the world. In railway transportation, gas lighting, water and electric power, hotel and real estate operation, he became one of the financial and industrial leaders of his generation.

Kenan Stadium was built as a memorial to his parents, William R. Kenan and Mary Hargrave Kenan. He was an 1864 Carolina graduate and she was a Chapel Hill native.

Lettermen's Day

The VMI game has been officially designated as Lettermen's Day. All former Tar Heel football lettermen are being invited back to campus on this day. Social events are planned both before and after the game.

Lights

Kenan Stadium now has permanent lights, installed as part of the 1988 expansion project. Kenan makes use of a General Electric low-mount system which minimizes the height of the lightpoles. It is similar to the system used at Soldier Field in Chicago. The lights were used for last year's late-afternoon games with Oklahoma and Louisville and will also make it possible to start this year's early-season games against VMI and Navy at 4 p.m.

Actually, two games were played under lights in Kenan before the permanent system was installed. Portable lights were brought into the stadium for the 1983 Duke and the 1987 Clemson games. Those games had late afternoon starts so they could be televised. Lights were a necessity since they finished after dark.

Linebackers

Over the years Carolina has produced as many outstanding linebackers as any school in the South. Six Tar Heel linebackers were on NFL pre-season rosters this year, including Pro Bowlers Lawrence Taylor and Mike Wilcher. More information on Carolina's star linebackers can be found on page 128 of this publication.

LT

Not only the greatest linebacker in Carolina history, but regarded by many as the best ever to play the game. In 1980 Lawrence Taylor was the Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year and a consensus All-America. He had a school-record 16 sacks that season for 127 yards in losses. Taylor was chosen second in the NFL draft behind Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers.

Mack Attack

That was the name given to the potent offense Mack Brown put together as offensive coordinator at LSU in 1982. The Tigers, 3-7-1 in 1981, improved to 8-2-1 and earned a berth in the Orange Bowl. LSU averaged over 400 yards a game in offense.

Mason, Morris

Longtime equipment manager at Kenan Fieldhouse. Mason served in that capacity from 1927 to 1973, an incredible 46-year period. It has been said that he came with the stadium since his first year on the job was also the initial season Kenan Stadium was used. Although he did not travel with the team in his first year, Mason saw every Tar Heel football game, home and away, for the next 45 seasons. In that period he became a friend and confidant to a multitude of Carolina players. He's retired now, but can always be found in Kenan Stadium on a Football Saturday.

Morehead Patterson Bell Tower

Located next to Kenan Stadium and generally referred to as simply the "Bell Tower." The 172-foot tower is built on a knoll and rises 200 feet above the campus. It contains a 10-bell carillon which calls students to class, provides twilight music and serenades football fans.

The Bell Tower was dedicated on November 26, 1932, just prior to the Carolina-Virginia football game. A replica of the famous West Point chime, the tower was the $100,000 gift of John Motley Morehead, then American ambassador to Sweden, and Rufus Lenoir Patterson II, a New York tobacco manufacturer. A concert, played entirely by hand, was heard 12 miles away in Durham. Students in the UNC Department of Music were bell ringers, playing the tower's carillon and presenting evening concerts and programs for special campus events until the late 1960's. Then an electronic control system for the chimes and a clock was installed.

The bells range in weight from 300 pounds to almost two tons. The bell tower has a four-faced clock and is crowned with a spire. The area surrounding the tower base was landscaped during the structure's construction and now is a small garden with pathways lined by boxwood hedges.

Morehead Planetarium

More than three million visitors have been attracted to the nation's first university affiliated—and the South's first—planetarium since it opened its doors in 1949. NASA astronauts from the Mercury expeditions through initial Space Shuttle flights used the facility as a celestial navigation training center.

The nucleus of the building is the Star Theater where presentations feature such topics as cosmology, black holes, space travel, sky watching, stars, galaxies and science fiction.

The planetarium also houses a 24-inch telescope and free art and scientific exhibitions, including a 35-foot walk-in Copernician Orrery, which demonstrates the movements of the planets and moons in the solar system. A sundial surrounded by a wide variety of hybrid rose bushes is located on the building's north side.

Planetarium shows are held nightly with additional shows on weekends.

N.C. State

Alma mater of Tar Heel offensive coordinator Darrell Moody. State's campus is neatly divided by railroad tracks right through the heart of it. The school's fight song was written by some original young Wolfpacker to that well-known sports melody, "As The Caissons Go Rolling Along." Formerly, North Carolina A&M, State trails Carolina in the all-time football series, 52-20-6.

Bumper stickers like this were big hits with Tar Heel fans in 1974, as was the running of James (Boom Boom) Betterson.

Nicknames

No college athlete may have ever had a more famous nickname than Choo Choo Justice. But, the Tar Heels have had a lot of other players with popular monikers. In the early part of the sport's history here, there were Mink Cunningham, Bull Council, Monk McDonald, Goat Randolph, Rabbit Bonner, Ox Shuford, Icky Garrett and Runt Lowe. Then came Sweet Jim Lalanne, Snuffy Stirnweiss, Goo Goo Gantt and Rip Hawkins.

The Seventies saw Boom Boom Betterson, Rocket Man (Mel Collins), Space Cowboy (Mike Voight), Famous Amos Lawrence and Billy The Horse Johnson. More recently, some of Carolina's players have been known simply by their initials. Lawrence Taylor was thus just LT and Kelvin Bryant was KB.

Norfolk, Va.

City which has produced five different All-Atlantic Coast Conference football players at Carolina, more than any other town. Those players are Buddy Payne (1957), Gene Brown (1972), Mike Mansfield (1972), Amos Lawrence (1977 and 1980) and Ricky Barden (1978 and 1979).

In addition, seven other Tar Heel All-ACC performers have been from the general Tidewater area of Virginia: Mike Voight (1975 and 1976), William Fuller (1981, 1982 and 1983) and Larry Griffin (1985) of Chesapeake; Chris Hanburger (1963 and 1964), Ron Spruill (1981 and 1982) and Walter Bailey (1986) of Hampton; and Lawrence Taylor (1980) of Williamsburg.

Officials

The Atlantic Coast Conference operates with a seven-man crew: a referee, umpire, head linesman, field judge, line judge, side judge and back judge. However, Tar Heel rivals in the league simply refer to each as "Carolina ref."

Old Well

The visual symbol of the University, the Old Well is pictured frequently on school literature, Christmas cards and student souveniers. Originally the sole water supply for campus, the Old Well still serves as a popular water fountain with water supplied by the town of Chapel Hill.

The original well was dug before 1800. The structure consisted of eight wooden columns, windlass and a top of slanted boards. In 1896 health officials ordered the open well closed and the University installed a hand pump. At that time, the present decorative form was given to the structure. The pump was replaced by a drinking fountain in 1925. In 1954 the University renovated the well again, replacing a concrete base with stone, the roof with new steel covered with copper sheeting and the old wood fountain with one of Grawol granite from Sweden. Brick walks were added at that time as were nearby benches and plants.

Operation Football

A whirlwind tour of the Atlantic Coast Conference's eight member schools during pre-season football drills. Writers and broadcasters meet with players and coaches from each team and observe practice. The longest-running such trip still in existence, the tour results in ACC football getting a lot of media attention over a 10-day period. Wagonmaster for this journey is Marvin "Skeeter" Francis of the conference office.

Photo Armbands

Photographers will not be allowed on the Kenan Stadium sidelines without an armband. They can be picked up in the press box prior to each game. However, each photographer must pick up his or her own armband.

Picture Day

Picture Day this year for Mack Brown's Tar Heels will be Sunday, August 27. Fans are invited to Kenan Stadium on this day to meet the Carolina players, get autographs and take pictures. Starting time is 3 p.m.

Pines

These are the tall trees which so magnificently surround Kenan Stadium. There is an old story that when Mr. Kenan gave the stadium to the University, he did so on condition that the stadium never rise higher than the tops of the trees. That's why expansion of the stadium has been done gradually over the years as the trees have continued to grow. It's a great story, but it's not true.

The Pines also was a famous restaurant in Chapel Hill for many years. Tar Heel coaches had many of their press conferences there. When Bill Dooley was coaching at Carolina he always had a back room reserved the night of each home game. He and his coaching staff would gather there with friends for a late dinner. The Pines was destroyed by fire, but a new building was constructed on the same property. It also carried the name The Pines for a while, but now operates as Slug's at The Pines. It is one of several restaurants in North and South Carolina run by Slug Claiborne of Charlotte.

Practice

North Carolina practices daily during the football season on Navy Field. This complex includes three complete football fields, one of them covered by artificial turf for special uses. Located on Ridge Road. Navy Field is just a short walk from Kenan Fieldhouse and the Tar Heel locker rooms.

Carolina practices are open to the media. However, members of the press should check by the Carolina Sports Information Office to pick up an admission pass.

Press Box

Carolina's long-needed new press box became a reality last year with the expansion project in Kenan Stadium. The new box is an elongated, one-level structure, stretching from 10-yard line to 10-yard line. The print media area has seats for over twice as many people as the old press box and it's filled for every game by the many daily newspapers which regularly cover the Tar Heels and those travelling with the opposing team. There are also three radio booths, a television booth and rooms for Carolina and opponents' athletic administrators. There are two elevators servicing the press box, one of which is used solely for the media.

Press Conferences

Mack Brown meets with the media each Tuesday preceding a game during the football season. Television and radio tapes are done at 11:30 a.m. with lunch served at noon. Brown has a question-and-answer session with newspapermen following the meal.

Professional Players

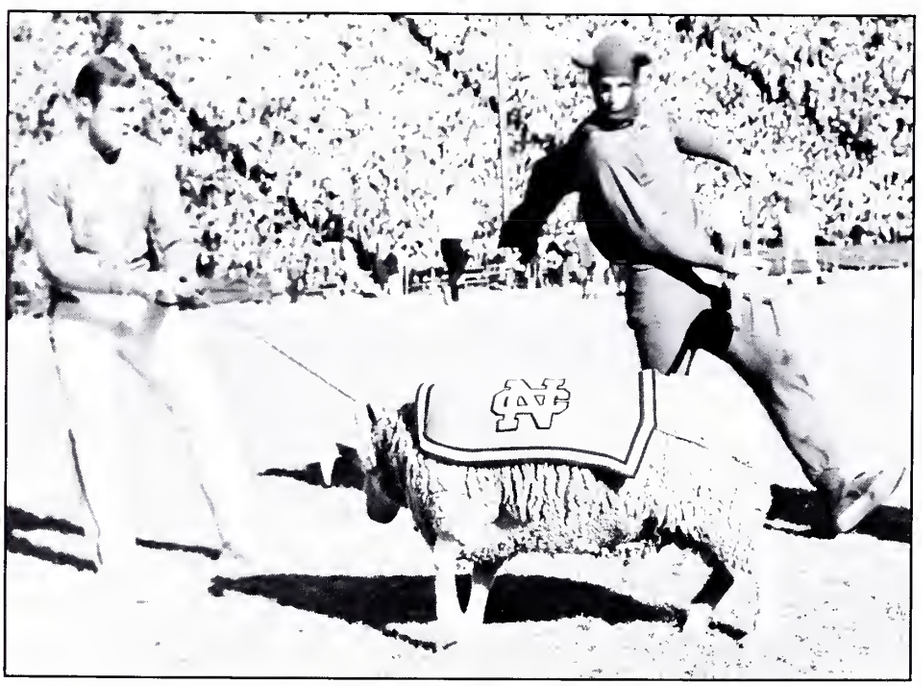
A list of former Tar Heel players who have also played professional football can be found on pages 134 and 135.

Last year USA TODAY ran a list of the schools which had the most players in the NFL last November. Carolina was tied for 10th with Auburn and Notre Dame in that survey. The leaders were: 1. Southern California. 2. Penn State. 3. Miami. 4. Washington. 5. UCLA. 6. Tennessee and Alabama. 8. Oklahoma and Pittsburgh. 10. North Carolina, Auburn and Notre Dame.

No other Atlantic Coast Conference team ranked in the top 20 in that survey.

Radio Network

The Tar Heel Football Network includes over 60 radio stations in four states. The network is operated by Village Companies of Chapel Hill with Bill Whitley as manager and Jim Heavner as executive producer. Woody Durham is beginning his 19th season of handling the play-by-play work with Mick Mixon adding color commentary.



A Rameses of the past prepares to duel one of those intelligent-looking Duke Blue Devils.

Rameses

The Tar Heel football mascot. A white ram has served in this capacity since 1924. Cheerleader Vic Huggins brought the original Rameses to campus. He had decided on a ram as a mascot by linking it with the nickname of Tar Heel star Jack Merritt, a fullback known as "The Battering Ram." Rameses has been a fixture ever since.

He's easily the finest mascot in the Atlantic Coast Conference since live animals are much better at this line of work than students dressed up in ridiculous costumes. Rameses has his most fun prior to the Duke game when he tries to outwit Blue Devil students trying to ramnap him. An old story that Richard Nixon, while a law student at Duke, was involved in an attempt to heist the Tar Heel mascot was denied by the White House during his presidency. Of course, a lot of other things were also denied by the White House in those days, too.

The current Carolina mascot is Rameses IXI.

Rathskeller

Better known as simply The Rat. Located in Amber Alley on Franklin Street, The Rat is a longtime favorite of Carolina students and alumni for food and drink. Established in 1946, The Rat serves sandwiches and pizza for lunch and complete dinners at night. In addition to food, you can also find out who's going to win Saturday's college football games, the name of the next heavyweight champion of the world and how far ahead of the opposition the Dodgers are in the National League West if your waiter happens to be Davis Blackwell. Like most of The Rat's waiters, Davis has been around so long the place wouldn't be the same without him.

Retired Numbers

Five football numbers have been retired at Carolina: 22 for Charlie Justice, 46 for Cotton Sutherland, 50 for Art Weiner, 59 for Andy Bershak and 99 for George Barclay. More information on these retired numbers can be found on page 158 of this media guide.

Return Men

Carolina has been blessed over the years with a number of exciting punt and kickoff return artists, including some of the best the college game has ever seen. The most famous, of course, was Charlie Justice. Justice has both the highest kickoff and punt return averages in school history. Choo Choo averaged 26.6 yards on 31 kickoff returns, including a 90-yarder for a touchdown against Florida in 1946. As a punt return man, Justice had a 14.2 average on 68 attempts. He brought back four punts for touchdowns—70 yards against Florida in 1946; 84 yards against Georgia and 50 yards against Virginia in 1948; and 75 yards against William and Mary in 1949.

However, there are some longtime observers of football in this state who say Justice might not have been the school's best at returning punts. They say Johnny Branch was unsurpassed in that area. Unfortunately, complete season records for 1929 and 1930 are unavailable so it is impossible to get an accurate average-per-return for Branch. But, as a senior in 1931 he averaged 19.8 yards on 10 returns. His career average had to be an incredible figure as evidenced by that season and partial records of his long plays the two previous years.

As a sophomore, Branch didn't play fulltime as he was just one of the stars on the famous "Team of a Million Backs." However, he did have a 60-yard punt return against Georgia Tech and another of 43 yards against Maryland. In 1930 he had punt returns covering 63, 68, 85 and 96 yards. The 85-yard sprint was for a touchdown against Virginia Tech, while the 96-yarder, still the longest in Tar Heel history, accounted for a score against Maryland. As a senior, the 5-5, 150-pound Branch had a 44-yard touchdown return against Virginia.

Other top punt return men have included George Stirnweiss, Hugh Cox, Dick Dashiell, Bud Carson and Greg Poole. James Betterson, Ken Willard and Don McCauley excelled in the kickoff return spot.

Rivalries

The Tar Heels have a lot of big ones in the Atlantic Coast Conference, seven to be exact. It's no secret that in league competition, Carolina is the team all other schools in the ACC would like to beat the most. That's why what has been accomplished here in athletics over the years is so amazing—the fact that everytime the Tar Heels take the field in an ACC event, they're facing an opponent ready to give its top effort of the year.

Now who does Carolina consider its biggest rival? One would get seven different answers from a group of Tar Heel fans. Safest reply is probably, "whoever the next opponent is."

Road Trip

The most famous road trip in Carolina football history was made by the 1892 team which played three games in four days, winning them all. The Tar Heels departed Chapel Hill by train on Tuesday, November 22, for Atlanta. They arrived at noon the following day and blasted Auburn, 64-0. It was back on a train that evening for a ride to Nashville and a 24-0 win over Vanderbilt on Thursday. Carolina then went back to Atlanta for a 26-0 victory over Virginia on Saturday.

Earlier in the year, the Tar Heels had played two other games on successive days, winning at Richmond, 40-0, and losing to Virginia in Charlottesville, 30-18. A 24-0 win over Trinity (now Duke) gave Carolina a final 5-1 record with all games played away from home. It was a road show not even Hope and Crosby would be able to top.

Secretaries

Trying to keep up with Carolina's workaholic football staff is an outstanding group of secretaries. The office supervisor and Mack Brown's personal secretary is Becky Medford. Maria Smith and Teresa Pollard handle the assistant coaches, Vicki Adcock works on recruiting with Joe Robinson and Joyce Goodwin is the main support for the academic support staff.

Simpson, O.J.

Former Southern California All-America tailback whose NCAA single-season rushing record was broken by Carolina's Don McCauley in 1970. McCauley ran for 1,720 yards that season. Simpson's old record of 1,709 had been set in 1968.

Smith

The most popular surname of Tar Heel football lettermen. There have been 19 lettermen named Smith, 17 players and two managers. The first was a manager, William Hopton Smith, in 1903. The first player was John Franklin Smith, a tackle, in 1932. The most recent was Quinton Smith, a wide receiver in 1987. The Carolina Smiths have been Bennie, Bill, Bob, Brian, Charles, Chip, Darryl, Dick, Foyell Pennington, Jan, John Franklin, Mark, Mike, Moyer, Quinton, Robbie, Roger, Wade and William Hopton.

Second-most popular last name is Johnson with 12. Third is Thompson with 11.

Sports Information Office

The Carolina Sports Information Office is located on the main office level of the Smith Center. Rick Brewer is beginning his 15th year as its director and his 22nd as a staff member. He's directly responsible for the publicizing of the Tar Heel football team. However, his two assistants, Dave Lohse and Scott Jared, also help with the many things that have to be done in an office which handles a major college football program. Lohse, in fact, edits the game program sold in Kenan Stadium each Saturday. The staff also includes intern Bob Socci, secretary Lee Snyder and a group of student workers headed by veterans Frank Andrews, Ansley Giannini, Mike Hill and Emily Watkins.

Sweet Carolines

This is a group of Carolina coeds who are of great assistance in the football office. During the week they help the secretarial staff with a wide range of duties. On Saturdays of home games they act as hostesses for prospective student-athletes and their parents who are visiting the campus.

Tailgating

Part of the tradition of a Football Saturday in Chapel Hill is eating off the back of a car before heading into the stadium. Most popular tailgate food is fried chicken. However, there is a varied menu throughout the parking lots around Kenan Stadium. Some fans now set up grills and have charbroiled hamburgers, hot dogs and steaks.

Team of A Million Backs

This was the great 1929 team which was so deep it fielded four entire backfields, all featuring top-notch performers. Carolina posted a 9-1 record under Coach Chuck Collins, scoring 346 points to rank second to Southern California in the nation in scoring. That average of 34.6 points per game for a season still stands as a school record. The only loss was a 19-12 setback to Georgia when the Bulldogs scored twice in the fourth quarter to win. A fumble recovery set up the winning touchdown.

Among the famed "million backs" were Jimmy Ward, Pete Wyrick, Jim Magner, Jimmy Maus, Strud Nash, Phil Jackson, Chuck Erickson, Henry House, Pap Harden, Yank Spaulding, Johnny Branch and Rip Slusser. Jackson threw a 78-yard touchdown pass to Spaulding against Maryland that year which stood for 14 seasons as the longest pass play in school history and still ranks as the fifth-longest.

While the team was noted for its game-breaking backs, it also had a host of outstanding linemen such as Ray Farris, Don Holt, Bill Koenig, Ned Lipscomb, Ellis Fysal, Bud Eskew, Fenton Adkins and Julian Fenner.

This team was a huge hit at the gate, drawing a record attendance of 139,500. That was topped by a crowd of 31,000 for a 41-7 rout of Virginia in Kenan Stadium.

Thousand-Yard Backs

Carolina has produced more 1,000-yard rushers than any other school in the country. Ten different Tar Heels have combined for 19 1,000-yard seasons. Southern California ranks second in 1,000-yard backs with 17. Carolina's group includes Don McCauley, who set an NCAA rushing record with 1,720 yards in 1970, and Amos Lawrence, one of only two major-college players in history to post four 1,000-yard seasons. For more information on the Tar Heels' 1,000-yard performers, see pages 126 and 127.

Ticket Information

Information on Carolina football tickets can be obtained at the Athletic Ticket Office, located on the office level of the Smith Center. Ken Brown, director of ticket operations, and his excellent staff can be reached at (919) 962-2296. However, one should drop by or call early as another season of sellouts is anticipated.

Unbeaten Season

Carolina's only perfect record was posted in 1898 when the Tar Heels were 9-0-0. Seven opponents were shut out—Guilford (18-0), North Carolina A&M (34-0), Greensboro Athletic Association (11-0), Oak Ridge (11-0), Davidson (11-0), Georgia (53-0) and Auburn (29-0). VPI fell, 28-6, and in the season finale on Thanksgiving Day, Virginia was beaten, 6-2. Will Reynolds was the Tar Heel coach and the team was captained by Frank Rogers.

The regular Carolina lineup included Herman Koehler (165 pounds) and Edwin Gregory (166) at end; Samuel Shull (175) and Frank Bennett (190) at tackle; R.S. Cromartie (155) and Ike Phifer (190) at guard; Mink Cunningham (148) at center; Rogers (150) at quarterback; Vernon Howell (138) and James MacRae (160) at halfback; and Ernest Graves (170) at fullback.

Victories

Carolina has 515 of them on the football field.

Victory Bell

The Victory Bell goes annually to the winner of the Carolina-Duke football game. A large bell on wheels, this prize to the winner of the big season finale was originated in the 1940's by Norm Sper, a Tar Heel cheerleader.

Wade, Jake

First fulltime sports information director at Carolina. A 1923 Tar Heel graduate, he returned to Chapel Hill in 1946 to handle sports publicity. Until that time the sports information work was done by the University News Bureau. Jake arrived back on campus just in time to help make Charlie Justice one of the most famous college football stars of all time. The Carolina Caravan columns he wrote in news releases were a big hit with fans and newspapermen alike.

Jake had been a highly successful newspaperman himself before taking the job at his alma mater. He worked on a number of newspapers, but probably gained his greatest fame as sports editor of the CHARLOTTE OBSERVER where he covered most of Joe Louis's championship fights and regularly staffed the World Series. However, his columns in the OBSERVER, Sports Parade, often were intimate pieces that had nothing to do with sports. Some of those ranked as his best columns, along with colorful essays on the Carolina-Duke football rivalry.

After Jake's death in 1962, he was honored by his fellow sports information directors. CoSIDA named one of its two most prestigious awards after him. The Jake Wade Award is presented annually to a member of the media who has made outstanding contributions to the field of intercollegiate athletics.

What It Was Was Football

The comedy single which launched the career of Andy Griffith. The story of a Saturday at Kenan Stadium was a national hit and Griffith, a Carolina alumnus, went on to a sensational Hollywood career.

Williamson, Ernie

One of the best known figures in Carolina athletics. Williamson, a tackle at Chapel Hill during the Justice Era, served as executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation from 1957 to 1986. In that role he became a friend to more Tar Heel alumni than anyone outside the Alumni Office itself. Ernie still serves the Foundation as director of the endowment. He's also a tremendous source of information on Carolina's athletic history.

Winning Streak

The most victories Carolina has ever put together in a row is 14 and was accomplished before the turn of the century. The Tar Heels went 9-0 in 1898 and then captured their first five games of the 1899 season before a tie with North Carolina A&M. A 13-game winning steak occurred during the 1947 and 1948 seasons. That included the last seven games of 1947 and the first six of 1948. That also was ended by a tie, a 7-7 deadlock with William and Mary.

Chancellor Paul Hardin

North Carolina native Paul Hardin is the seventh chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His goal is to provide leadership to carry forward the University's time-honored tradition of vital teaching, cutting-edge research and distinguished public service.

"In the complex and highly competitive world of public higher education, the future belongs to those institutions and persons who command it, not to those who wait passively for it to happen," Hardin says. "With a clear sense of our mission, an abiding commitment to academic freedom, and a deep appreciation of Carolina's history and traditions, we will boldly lead the University into its third century."

Hardin has been associated with college and university campuses ever since he enrolled at Duke University at the age of 17. He came to Chapel Hill in 1988 after 13 years as president of Drew University in Madison, N.J. The Methodist school has more than 2,400 students, and Hardin left after steering Drew toward a sound academic standing and financial stability when many small colleges were faced with declining enrollments.

He also was president of Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas, from 1972 to 1974, president of Wofford College in Spartanburg, S.C., from 1968 to 1972, a member of the Duke law school faculty for 10 years, and a practicing lawyer. He has been a visiting professor at the law schools of the universities of Pennsylvania, Texas and Virginia.

Hardin was named one of the 100 most effective university leaders in the nation in a 1987 study conducted by researchers at Bowling Green University. The study found that the best presidents are "strong risk-taking leaders with a dream" who rely on respect rather than popularity and work long hours.

Although he has been associated with private schools, Hardin knows about public institutions. He was a member of the Board of Higher Education in New Jersey from 1983 to 1988.

At Drew, Hardin was active with fund raising, increasing its endowment from $22 million to about $70 million. He helped bring in capital funds as well as two endowed chairs—the William R. Kenan professorship in history and the Baldwin professorship in humanities.

New programs started at Drew during Hardin's tenure include a freshman seminar series to promote critical thinking and writing skills; the Charles A. Dana Research Institute for Scientists Emeriti, which brings retired corporate scientists to campus to continue their research and to interact with students; and College Connection, an educational, cultural and self-enrichment program for minority high school students. He also believes in the value of computers in the educational process. Drew was the first liberal arts institution to issue a personal computer to all entering freshmen, which they take with them after graduation.

In other educational activities, Hardin is the co-chairman of the Japan-U.S. Conference of University Presidents, was a member of the Board of Directors of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, has served twice as president of the National Association of Schools and Colleges of the United Methodist Church and was chairman of the National Commission on United Methodist Higher Education.

While teaching law at Duke, he won a four-year Ford Foundation grant for summer study in comparative law. He traveled to universities in Canada, Jamaica, Nigeria and Scotland. He published numerous articles on legal topics and is the co-author of two books, "Cases and Materials on the Administration of Criminal Justice" and "Evidence: Cases and Materials." His other writings have addressed civil and criminal trial procedures in Scotland, executive privilege in the federal courts and college campus unrest.

He has been involved in politics, running for mayor of Durham in 1967 and serving as the second chairman of Durham's Human Relations Council.

Hardin, 58, was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate in English at Duke in 1952 and a member of the varsity golf team. He graduated from Duke's law school in 1954, first in his class, and edited the law review. Hardin practiced law briefly in Alabama before returning to Duke in 1958 to teach law. A former member of Duke's Board of Trustees, he holds six honorary degrees.

Born in Charlotte, Hardin and his wife, Barbara, call several places in North Carolina home because they were the children of Methodist ministers. During his youth, he lived in Concord, Waynesville, Wadesboro, Asheboro, Shelby and High Point. She is from the eastern part of the state. They have three children: Paul Russell of Atlanta; Sandra Mikush of Durham; and Dorothy Holmes of Birmingham, Mich. His parents, Dorothy and the Bishop Paul Hardin Jr., live in Asheville.

The Swoffords: Autumn, Becky, Chad and John

Director of Athletics John Swofford

The director of athletics at the University of North Carolina is John Swofford, nationally recognized as one of the best administrators in intercollegiate sports.

Swofford, a 1971 Carolina graduate, is in his 10th year as head of his alma mater's athletic department. The Tar Heel program is one of the biggest in the South, fielding 26 varsity teams, and one of the finest in the nation in terms of success both on and off the playing field.

In his nine years as athletic director, Swofford has seen Carolina teams win 52 Atlantic Coast Conference championships and 11 national collegiate titles. In fact, the Tar Heels have just completed the most successful decade of conference and national championships in school history. In addition, Carolina won more ACC and NCAA titles than any other league school in the 1980's.

Swofford has guided the UNC Athletic Department through a period of tremendous change which has left it both vastly different and vastly better than it was when he took its top job in 1980.

With Swofford in the lead, Carolina successfully completed a $34 million fund-raising drive to construct the Smith Center, a complex which includes a 21,444-seat basketball arena and an Olympic-size swimming pool. He was also the driving force behind the expansion of Kenan Stadium in 1988 and the building of a new press box there. He has a special love for the stadium and made sure its natural beauty would not be damaged before going ahead with the greatly needed alterations.

Swofford planned the construction of the Student-Athlete Development Center as an addition to Kenan Fieldhouse. That building, a one-of-a-kind facility, includes the most modern equipment to aid student-athletes in their studies and physical development.

A Morehead Scholar himself, Swofford has a special interest in the academic side of intercollegiate athletics. The academic center at Kenan is a prototype in its field. He has expanded the academic support staff to function better for the student-athletes who use its services. One of the many results has been the fact Carolina has had more students on the ACC Academic Honor Roll in the last two years than ever before.

Since Swofford became athletic director, a new tennis stadium and clubhouse have been built and an indoor tennis facility is currently being designed; Boshamer Stadium has been expanded and dressing rooms renovated for the baseball teams; three new holes have been completed at Finley Golf Course; the football practice fields have been reconstructed and lighted; a new Astroturf playing field installed; renovation has begun on the Fetzer Field track; and the department has been computerized.

Nationally, Swofford was appointed to the NCAA Football Television Committee in 1982 and was named its chairman in 1984. He handled the committee during the stormy dispute over football television rights. A past chairman of the NCAA Communications Committee, he is now chair of the Special Events/Post-Season Bowl Committee. He served as chairman of the ACC Television Committee when the current basketball contract was signed. This is generally considered to be the most lucrative regional television agreement in college sports.

These accomplishments have not gone unnoticed. In a 1986 ARIZONA REPUBLIC poll of athletic personnel across the country, he was chosen one of the top three athletic directors in the nation. He has elected to turn down several other prominent athletic director positions, as well as inquiries regarding being a conference commissioner, to remain in Chapel Hill.

A native of North Wilkesboro, N.C., Swofford was a two-time all-state football player and a three-sport star at Wilkes Central High School. An honor student in high school, he majored in psychology and industrial relations at Carolina.

Swofford played quarterback and defensive back on Tar Heel football teams in 1969, 1970 and 1971. Those last two teams went to bowl games. He tied a then-school record against Vanderbilt in 1969 by throwing three touchdown passes in one game.

He was named to the ACC Academic Honor Roll and Who's Who in College Athletics. He also served as president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes on campus.

In 1973 he earned a masters in athletic administration at Ohio University.

From 1973 to 1976 he was athletic ticket manager and assistant to the director of athletic facilities at the University of Virginia. He returned to Carolina in May, 1976 as assistant athletic director and business manager, handling all the athletic department's business affairs.

Although he remained assistant athletic director, Swofford dropped the business manager title and was named assistant executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation in January, 1979. In that job he was in charge of the overall financial structure of the athletic department. His position with the Educational Foundation involved general office procedures and fund-raising. He then replaced Bill Cobey as athletic director on May 1, 1980.

Swofford is a member of the executive committee of the National Association of Collegiate Athletic Directors and is on the alumni advisory board for the Ohio University Sports Administration program. He received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Ohio University in 1984. He has been inducted into the Order of the Golden Fleece, Carolina's highest honorary society.

Swofford serves on the board of directors of the Chapel Hill Ronald McDonald House and North Carolina National Bank in Chapel Hill. He also was on the board of directors for North Carolina Amateur Sports which brough the 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival to this area.

A regular jogger, Swofford enjoys reading, golf and tennis. He is married to the former Becky Owens of North Wilkesboro. They have two children, Autumn and Chad.

Head Coach
MACK BROWN

Mack Brown heads into his second season as head football coach at the University of North Carolina with expectations growing about his Tar Heel program.

Although Carolina struggled on the field last season and will face major problems again this fall, there is an air of anticipation about the sport in Chapel Hill. The main reason is Brown, the dynamic 38-year old coach who has taken on the challenge of rebuilding an outstanding program which has slipped.

If his first year on the job is any indication, he may well take it to new heights.

Brown has injected optimism and excitement back into the sport here. Outgoing and personable, he's been a hit with students and fans. He's honest and forthright in dealings with his players and has proven to be an outstanding recruiter in his short time here.

Brown has tremendous communicating skills and mixes well with people from all walks of life. He genuinely likes to be around all types of people and makes himself available to students, faculty, alumni, fans and media. He is regarded by the press as the most accessible coach in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Although Carolina lacked speed last fall and was plagued by inexperience on defense and at quarterback, Brown put the responsibility for the season entirely on his own shoulders. That refusal to shift the blame to others, even though he obviously didn't deserve it, may have won him as many fans as anything.

"When a team doesn't win, it's the head coach's fault," explained Brown during the season. "You can't blame players or assistant coaches for losses. It all comes back to the head coach. But, believe me, we're going to straighten things out here."

People who have been touched by his magnetism and enthusiasm definitely believe that. Brown has been a winner throughout his career and he plans to win here, too.

"If Mack Brown can't win at Carolina, no one can," says Charlie Justice, the All-America tailback who led the Tar Heels to three major bowl games in the late Forties. "He's perfect for the school and for our state. He understands people, especially the young players. I can see him eventually having the type of success that our teams did."

Brown became the Carolina coach on December 15, 1987. His selection to replace Dick Crum was made by Athletic Director John Swofford and approved by Chancellor Christopher Fordham.

In announcing the choice of Brown to head the Tar Heel program, Swofford said, "We wanted a man of integrity, a leader and a motivator with a passion for college football and someone with an entertaining offense.

"Mack's name ran through the entire search process. We believe this is the right fit, the right man at the right time for Carolina football."

Brown come to Carolina from Tulane where he rejuvenated the Green Wave's sagging football fortunes in just three years, taking his team to only its fifth bowl game since 1940 in his final season.

However, Brown may be best known for helping develop some of the most explosive offenses in college football. As an offensive coordinator, he directed record-setting attacks at Oklahoma, LSU and Iowa State.

Oklahoma Athletic Director Donnie Duncan, the former head coach at Iowa State, touched on that when he heard Brown was coming to Chapel Hill.

"North Carolina has hired a fantastic young coach, someone the University will be proud of for many years," he said. "He's great with kids and he's great for kids. He'll emphasize education and convince players of its importance.

"Offensively, he's got a fantastic mind. He's very innovative. He's an outstanding teacher, an outstanding motivator and is extremely capable on game days. I've known him in all types of situations. I would have to say North Carolina hit a home run."

Brown says he took the Tar Heel job for a number of reasons.

"Everything you need to have a great football program is here," he points out, "facilities, a dedicated staff, a tremendous academic institution and outstanding high school talent in this and surrounding states.

"When I first started coaching I put together a list of jobs in which I thought I would have interest. Carolina was very high on that list.

"We're talking about a university that has one of the best athletic programs in the country. We're talking about a program that believes in ethics and a university that also believes in having the highest regard for academic standards."

Brown says he has three goals for the student-athletes who play for him.

"The number one thing is for each young person to get his degree. We also want them to do the best they can academically to prepare themselves for later life.

"The second thing is that we want to win. And last, but certainly not least, we want the young people to have fun."

Brown's last Tulane team certainly had fun in 1987, in completing one of the fastest turn-arounds in the country. Brown went to Tulane on December 16, 1984 as head coach and was also appointed the school's athletic director the following April. The Green Wave had suffered three straight losing seasons before Brown's arrival in New Orleans and went 1-10 and 4-7 in his first two years on the job.

However, Tulane then posted a 6-5 record, earning a spot opposite Washington in the Independence Bowl. In the process, the Green Wave set school records for total offense and points. Tulane ranked 11th in the nation in scoring, averaging 32.5 points a game. Wide receiver Marc Zeno won first-team All-America honors and quarterback Terrence Jones was fourth nationally in total offense and 10th in passing.

"Simply amazing" is the way Appalachian State Athletic Director Jim Garner describes Brown's success at Tulane. Garner, who gave Brown his first head coaching job at Appalachian, has followed his career closely.

"He had to build the Tulane program back from ashes." says Garner. "It was almost like he walked into a war zone down there, but he's got that kind of competitiveness. He refuses to use the word 'failure.' He was determined to make that program go."

Brown's successes at Tulane came in other places as well as on the football field. As athletic director, he oversaw the construction of a new football locker room facility, a football practice field surrounded by an eight-lane all-weather track, an artificial turf practice area and the first phase of a multi-million dollar baseball stadium. He also got plans underway for a new athletic office complex.

With Brown in the lead, the Green Wave Club, Tulane's fund-raising arm, raised over 1.4 million dollars in each of his last two years, up from an average of $800,000. However, coaching is what Brown enjoys most. With his enthusiasm for the game and the great rapport he has with young people, it's easy to understand why he's been successful.

In his first head coaching job at Appalachian, he directed the Mountaineers to a 6-5 record in 1983 at the age of 32. He went to Oklahoma the following season as offensive coordinator.

In his year on Barry Switzer's staff, the Sooners averaged 325.8 yards a game in total offense in compiling a 9-2-1 record, won the Big Eight championship and earned a berth in the Orange Bowl. Brown helped Oklahoma develop its best passing attack in years to go along with its always potent option-oriented running game. His success there helped lead to the Tulane job.

Prior to taking the head coach's position at Appalachian, Brown had been offensive coordinator at LSU in 1982. The Tigers went 8-2-1 and played in the Orange Bowl. The "Mack Attack" offense was the second most improved in the nation that fall, averaging over 400 yards a game.

While at Iowa State, from 1979 to 1981, Brown served as receivers coach for one year and as offensive coordinator for the last two seasons. In his time as offensive coordinator the Cyclones broke 17 school and Big Eight Conference records and produced league leaders in rushing and total offense.

Brown began his full-time coaching career at Southern Mississippi in 1974, working with receivers for four seasons, and then spent one year coaching that same position at Memphis State.

A native of Cookeville, Tenn., Brown attended Vanderbilt and Florida State. He lettered twice as a running back for the Seminoles in 1971 and 1972. He finished work on his bachelor's degree in education at FSU in 1974. While there, he worked on a part-time basis, coaching receivers and the junior varsity. He received his master's degree in administration from Southern Mississippi in 1976.

Brown had been a three-sport star at Putnam County High School, lettering three times in football. He won all-state and All-America honors and was selected one of the nation's top 100 running backs by Scholastic Magazine in 1968. He was class president and a Who's Who in America choice.

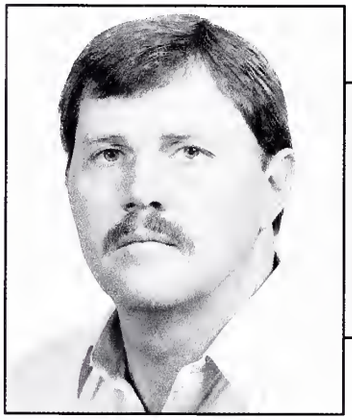
Although Brown's goal at Carolina is to recruit the best players in the country, he would like his staff to be most effective in the states of North Carolina and Virginia.

"From the time I've spent here and the time I was at Appalachian, I know there are some outstanding high school coaches in these two states," he says. "Our goal is to recruit the ACC area in general with special emphasis on North Carolina and Virginia. Traditionally, that's where Carolina has gotten some of its best players.

"We are the state university. We should recruit here first. Kids in this area have grown up hearing about Carolina. They are familiar with what it means to play here. Now, that certainly doesn't mean we won't go outside the ACC area for players. If there are young people in another part of the country who have an interest in us, we'll talk to them. But, I do think we should take advantage of the fine high school coaching and talent we have here before we look elsewhere."

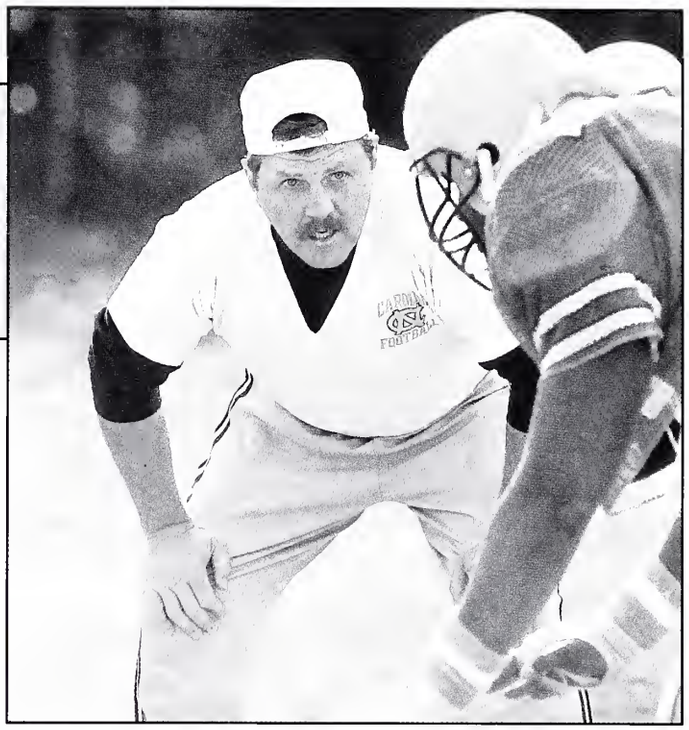
Brown is married to the former Debbie Morris of Pensacola, Fla. They have two children, Katherine Jane (12) and Barbara Ellen (9).

The Tar Heel Staff



Dan Brooks

(Defensive Line Coach)



Working with the Tar Heel defensive line is Dan Brooks, who grew up and spent the early part of his career coaching in western North Carolina.

Brooks came to Chapel Hill in the spring of 1988 from the University of Florida where he had been coaching the Gator middle guards. Two of his players there, Tim Newton in 1984 and Jeff Roth in 1987, won All-Southeastern Conference honors. Newton was a second-team All-America.

A native of Sparta, N.C., Brooks played football at Appalachian State in 1969 before joining the U.S. Army Special Forces School that December. He served in the Special Forces division for three years and also played interservice football with the Army Gunners. He then enrolled at Western Carolina in 1972, receiving his B.S. in Education in 1976.

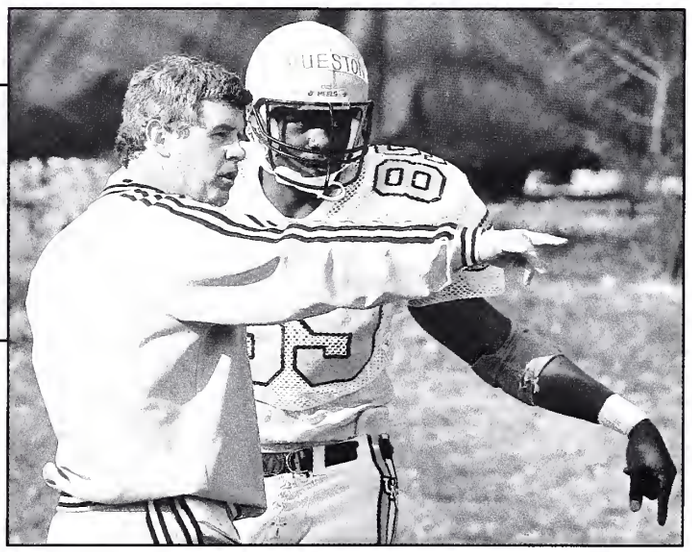
While at Western Carolina, he coached the Catamounts' defensive ends for two seasons. After graduation, he became offensive and defensive line coach at Kings Mountain High School in North Carolina in 1976. He was defensive coordinator and offensive line coach in 1977 and then served as the school's head coach and athletic director from 1978 to 1982.

In 1983 he joined the Florida staff as a graduate assistant. He received a masters degree in Administration and Supervision from Florida the following year and also became a full-time member of the coaching staff.

Brooks is married to the former Kathy Whitaker. They have a daughter, Tara, and a son, Rhett.

Jim Cavanaugh

(Wide Receiver Coach)



Jim Cavanaugh, who has spent a lifetime working in the Atlantic Coast Conference area, will again coach the Carolina wide receivers.

Cavanaugh came to Chapel Hill in 1988 from the University of Maryland where he had been offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach the previous year. He had coached running backs there from 1982 to 1986. In addition, he also has spent five other seasons in the ACC, coaching at N.C. State and Virginia. He has helped coach four ACC championship teams—three at Maryland and one at State.

An All-Southern Conference wide receiver at William and Mary, Cavanaugh caught 117 passes in his college career for 1,600 yards. He was an honorable mention All-America.

After graduation in 1970, Cavanaugh coached two years of high school football in Newport News, Va. at Newport News High and Denbigh High. He then went to N.C. State as a graduate assistant to Lou Holtz. After receiving a masters degree in Education there, he spent three years coaching receivers and running backs at VMI. He returned to N.C. State to coach wide receivers in 1977 and 1978.

In 1979 he became offensive coordinator at Marshall. After serving there for two seasons, he came back to the ACC to coach the Virginia wide receivers in 1981. He joined Bobby Ross's Maryland staff the following year.

A native of Queens, N.Y., Cavanaugh is married to the former Marsha Carnell of Atlanta, Ga. They have two children, Ryan and Lauren.

Vince Hoch

(Secondary Coach)

Running the Carolina secondary is Vince Hoch, a 19-year veteran of college coaching.

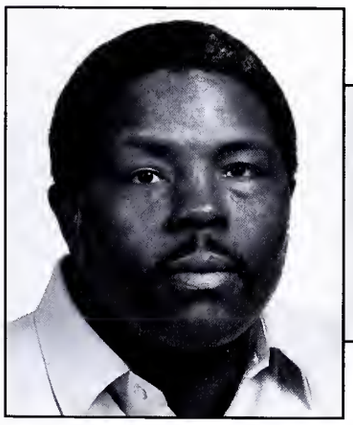
Hoch is one of five coaches Mack Brown brought with him to Chapel Hill off his Tulane staff in December, 1987.

A native of Harrisburg, Pa., Hoch is a 1966 graduate of Pfeiffer College. Prior to going to Pfeiffer, he signed a football grant-in-aid with Arizona State. However, he instead spent four seasons playing professional baseball in the Chicago Cubs' and Washington Senators' organizations.

He began his coaching career with two years at John Harris High School, his alma mater, and then two at Millville High in New Jersey. Following those jobs he was on the Temple staff for 13 straight years, during which the Owls posted a 76-45-3 record. He was the defensive line coach from 1970 to 1973, worked with linebackers from 1974 to 1977 and then handled the secondary from 1978 to 1982. He also was defensive coordinator from 1972 to 1982 and assistant head coach from 1980 to 1982.

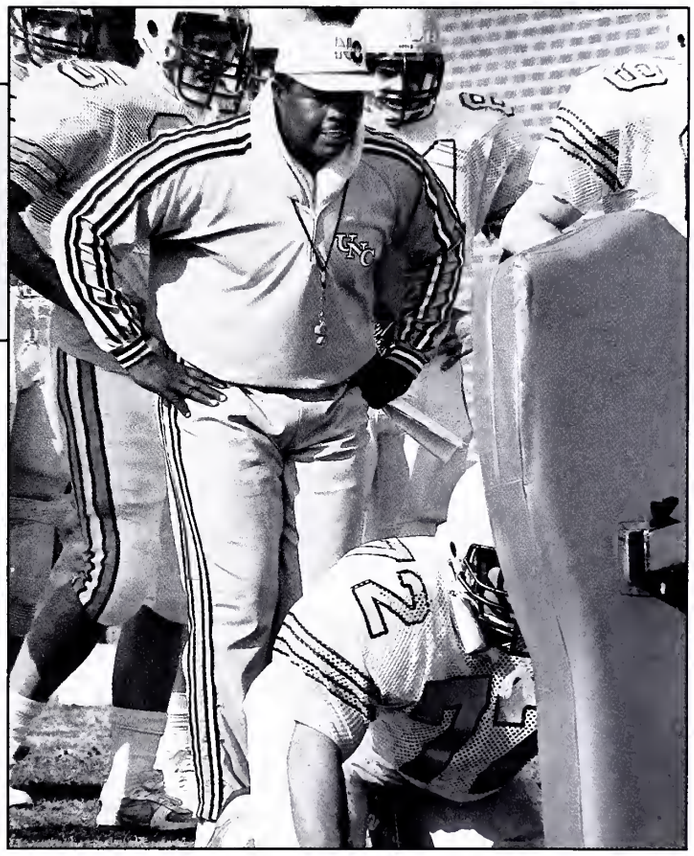
In 1983 Hoch went to Memphis State to work for the late Rex Dockery for one season. He then worked briefly for Lou Holtz at Minnesota before becoming assistant head coach and defensive coordinator at Kansas under Mike Gottfried. He went to Mississippi State in 1986 and his pass defense finished sixth in the national statistics. He then joined Brown at Tulane in 1987.

Hoch his married to the former Constance Hackett. They have two daughters, Sharon and Michele.



Terry Lewis

(Tight End and Offensive Tackle Coach)



Coaching the Tar Heel offensive tackles and tight ends is Terry Lewis, an all-star performer in his own playing days at Southern University.

Lewis was a member of Mack Brown's 1987 Tulane staff and joined him at Carolina that December after Brown was named the head coach here. His top player last fall, tackle Darrell Hamilton, was a third-round selection in the National Football League draft.

A native of Memphis, Tenn., Lewis is a 1970 graduate of Southern where he won all-conference and All-America honors as a senior offensive lineman. He played briefly with the Buffalo Bills of the NFL before beginning his coaching career.

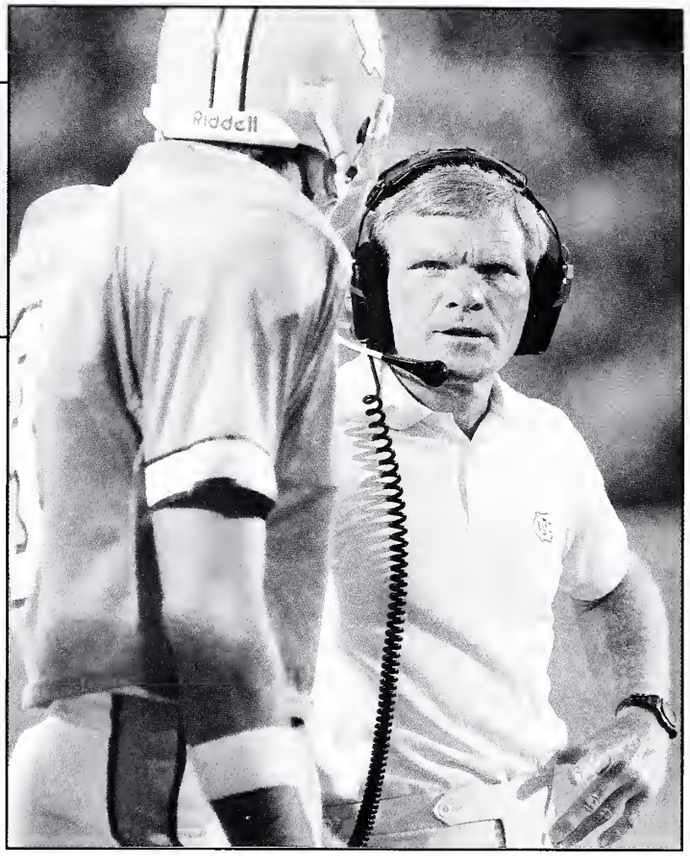
Lewis's first coaching job was at the U. S. Naval Academy Prep School in 1971. He then was on Navy's staff from 1972 to 1974 before going to Western Michigan for two years. He then spent two seasons each at Illinois and Southern. He coached at East Carolina in 1981 and then went back to Navy for a two-year stint.

In 1984 Lewis began a three-year stop at LSU. In that period, the Tigers went to the Sugar Bowl twice and to the Liberty Bowl once. He left there to join Brown at Tulane for the 1987 season. In all of his coaching assignments, Lewis has worked with the offensive line.

Lewis is married to the former Tessa Sanders. They have three children—Terry II, Jonathan and Wyatt.

Milo McCarthy

(Running Back Coach)



Milo McCarthy, who has helped produce some of the game's most dynamic performers, will again coach the Tar Heel running backs.

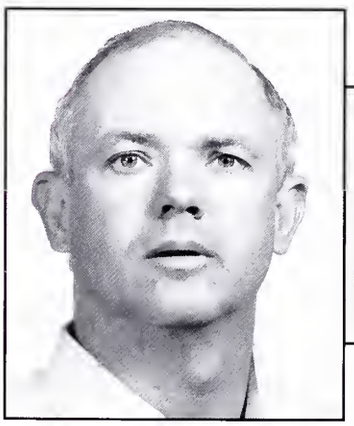
McCarthy is one of five Tulane coaches who joined Mack Brown at Carolina in December, 1987. He had just completed his first season on the Green Wave staff after spending the first part of his college coaching career at Southern Mississippi and SMU.

A native of New Orleans, La., McCarthy is a 1968 gradaute of Southern Mississippi. He was a star running back for the Golden Eagles, ranking 11th on USM's career rushing list with 1,240 yards and scoring 10 touchdowns. He completed a masters degree in Education at Southern Miss in 1970.

Following four years of coaching in the high school ranks, McCarthy joined Bobby Collins's Southern Mississippi staff in 1975 as tight end coach. He began working with running backs in 1976. One of his players there was Denver Broncos star Sammy Winder. Brown and Carolina offensive coordinator Darrell Moody worked with him at USM.

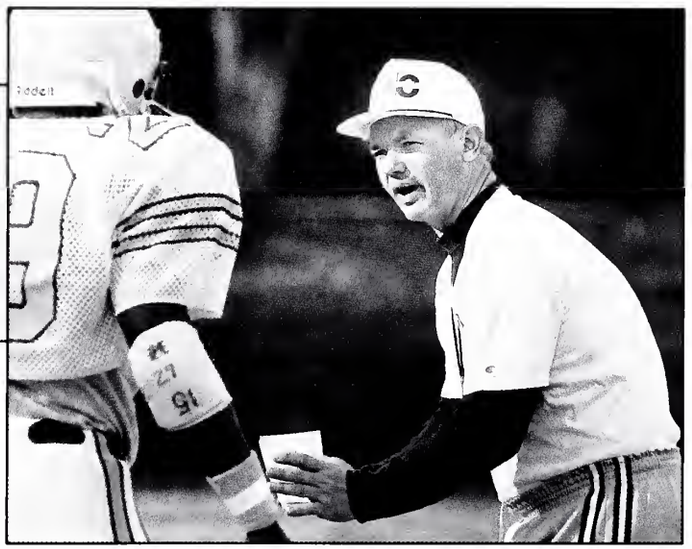
McCarthy went to SMU in 1982 for five years, returned briefly to Southern Mississippi and then joined Brown at Tulane. While at SMU, he coached three Southwest Conference rushing champions—Eric Dickerson in 1982 and Reggie Dupard in 1983 and 1985. Under his guidance, Kennard Martin led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rushing last fall, becoming Carolina's 19th 1,000-yard back.

McCarthy is married to the former Jacqueline Ohlsen. They have three sons—Sean, Scott and Shane.



Darrell Moody

(Offensive Coordinator and Quarterback Coach)



Coordinating the Carolina offense and coaching the quarterbacks is Darrell Moody, who is teaming with Mack Brown at his fifth different school.

Moody handled those same roles for Brown during his three years at Tulane. In that time his quarterback, Terrence Jones, set Green Wave total offense records for a game, season and career. Jones was fourth in the nation in total offense in 1987 and Tulane was 11th in scoring.

A native of Asheboro, N.C., Moody was an all-state football and baseball player at Asheboro High School. He played both sports at N.C. State, graduating in 1970. He also got his masters there.

He began his coaching career at Asheboro High in 1971 and 1972. He returned to N.C. State as a graduate assistant in 1973 and 1974 before taking his first full-time position at Southern Mississippi. Brown was also on the Golden Eagle staff.

Moody returned to N.C. State from 1976 to 1979, coaching quarterbacks and running backs the last three years. He then coached running backs at LSU from 1980 to 1983. Brown was his coordinator there in 1982. The two men were also together briefly at Appalachian State before Brown went to Oklahoma. Moody served as the Mountaineers' assistant head coach in 1984. He then joined Brown at Tulane the following season.

Married to the former Martha Ann Henry, Moody and his wife have two children, Christopher Lee and Michael Scott.

Donnie Thompson

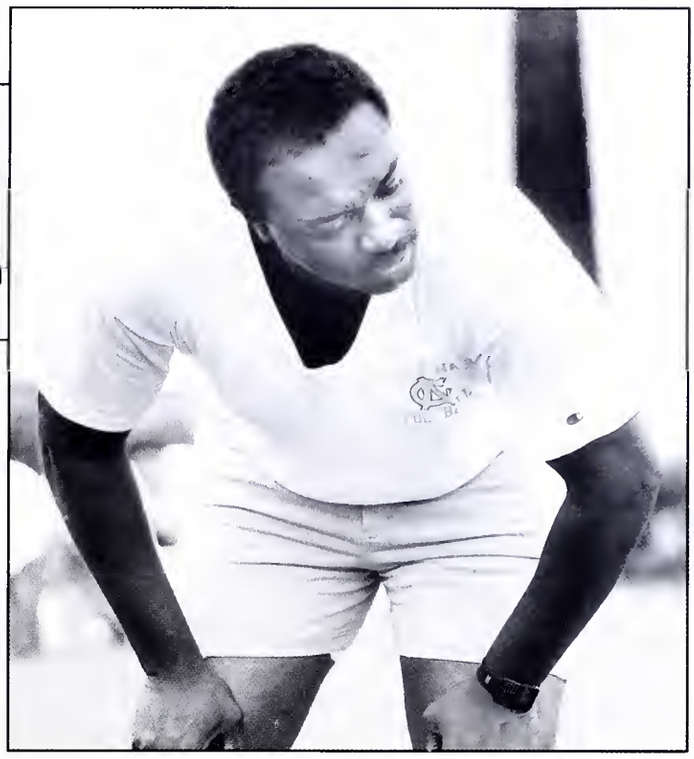
A native of Bogalusa, La., Thompson was an all-conference linebacker at Connecticut in his playing days. He also won All-East honors. As a senior, he was the Huskies' team captain and was voted the squad's most valuable player. He earned a bachelor degree there in 1975 and a masters in 1976.



Thompson and his wife, Gilda, have two children, Don and Amie.

Monk Tomlinson

(Offensive Guard and Center Coach)

Howard "Monk" Tomlinson brings 30 years of coaching experience to his job as the man in charge of the Tar Heel offensive guards and centers.

Tomlinson was one of five Tulane assistant coaches brought to Carolina by Mack Brown in December, 1987. He had handled the same position assignments in three years on Brown's Tulane staff.

In his first year on the job here, Tomlinson had two players win All-Atlantic Coast Conference honors—center Jeff Garnica and guard Pat Crowley. Garnica won the Jacobs Blocking Trophy as the top blocker in the league.

A 1959 graduate of William and Mary, Tomlinson began his coaching career at Maryville College in Tennessee. He was the offensive line coach there from 1959 to 1963. He then served as the school's head coach until 1971.

From 1971 to 1973, Tomlinson was offensive backfield coach at Tennessee Tech. He then spent 10 years at Northeast Louisiana before going to Tulane. He was the backfield coach from 1974 to 1978 and then served as offensive line coach and recruiting coordinator during the rest of his time there.

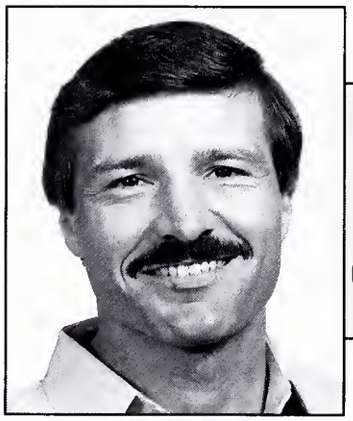
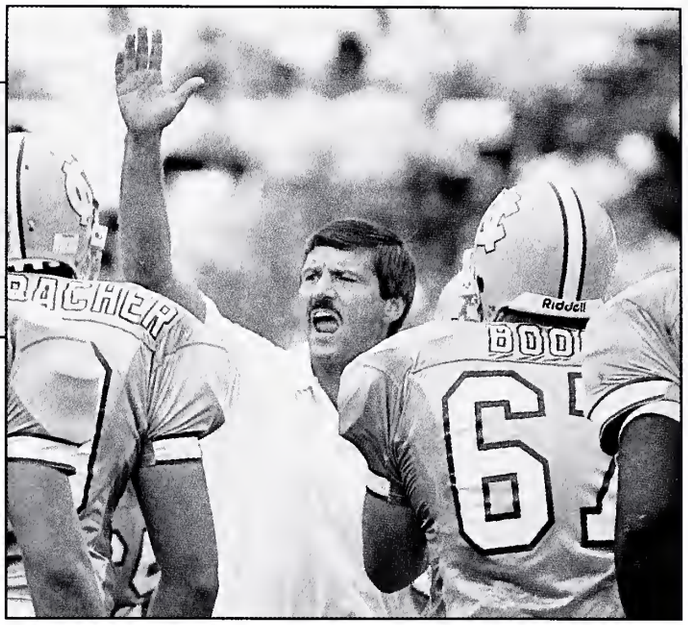
Tomlinson is married to the former Shirley Ann Burgess. They have two children, Julie Ann and John Curtis.



Carl Torbush

(Defensive Coordinator and Linebacker Coach)



Carl Torbush is beginning his second season as Carolina's defensive coordinator and coach of the team's inside linebackers.

Torbush gave up the head coaching job at Louisiana Tech to join Mack Brown's staff last year. A 15-year coaching veteran, Torbush has spent most of his career working with defenses.

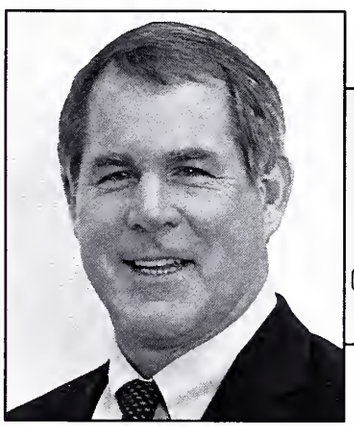
Prior to taking the head job at Louisiana Tech, he had been the defensive coordinator and linebacker coach at the University of Mississippi. In four years at Ole Miss, Torbush took the Rebels from last in the Southeastern Conference in total defense to first in 1986.

From 1979 to 1982, Torbush had been assistant head coach, recruiting coordinator and linebacker coach at Louisiana Tech. The Bulldogs were second in the 1982 I-AA national rankings and made the national playoffs.

Torbush's other coaching assignments have been as an assistant at Carter High School in Knoxville, Tenn. in 1974; a graduate assistant under Grant Teaff at Baylor in 1975; and linebacker and defensive end coach at Southeastern Louisiana from 1976 to 1978. He also served as baseball coach there.

A native of East Spencer, N.C., Torbush is a graduate of Austin East High School in Knoxville where he won all-state honors in football and baseball. He attended Tennessee and Carson-Newman, graduating in 1974. He was a first-team All-America at Carson-Newman in both football and baseball and played in the Kansas City Royals' organization for one year before going to graduate school at Baylor.

He is married to the former Janet Gilbert of Kingsport, Tenn. She has a Ph.D. and has taught physical education at Carolina.



Joe Robinson

(Assistant Athletic Director for Recruiting)

Joe Robinson, a star on Carolina's 1963 Gator Bowl championship team, is now in his third year of directing the Tar Heels' recruiting services.

In his job at Chapel Hill, Robinson coordinates football recruiting, assists coaches of non-revenue sports in their recruiting and also performs other duties in the athletic department. However, his focus is on football.

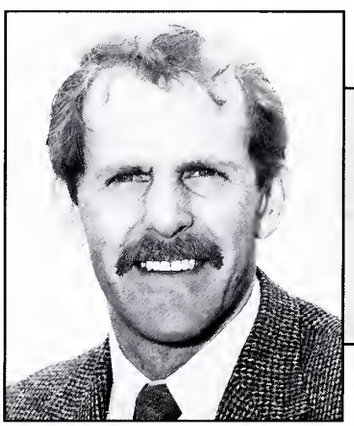
A native of Black Mountain, N.C., Robinson was a senior end on the 1963 Carolina football team which tied for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and swamped the Air Force Academy, 35-0, in the Gator Bowl. Robinson was the Tar Heels' second-leading receiver that year with 19 catches for 259 yards and three touchdowns. He received both his undergraduate and masters degrees in Education at Carolina.

After graduating, Robinson entered the coaching profession as an assistant at Fike High School in Wilson, N.C. in 1964. He worked there three seasons before spending two years in military service.

Robinson then worked as an assistant at VMI, Duke and Virginia from 1968 to 1973. He was the head freshman coach and offensive line coach at VMI, defensive line coach at Duke and worked with receivers at Virginia.

In 1973 he became head coach at Westminster School in Atlanta and stayed there until returning to the Virginia staff in 1979. He went from there on to Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Va. in 1982 as head football coach and golf coach. He remained there until coming to Carolina in August, 1987 to accept his present position.

Robinson is the father of a son, Ben.



John Blanchard

(Director of Athletic Academic Affairs)

John Blanchard is beginning his fifth year as director of athletic academic affairs at Carolina.

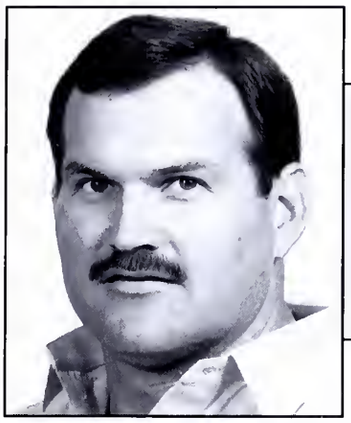
In this position, Blanchard heads up the Tar Heel academic counseling program for student-athletes.

A native of Sacramento, Calif., Blanchard is a 1975 graduate of Stanford University. He was voted the most inspirational senior on the 1974 football team there and won first-team All-West Coast honors. He was a first-team Churchmen's All-America and a second-team All-Pac Eight selection.

After graduation, Blanchard became national director of the NCAA's Volunteers for Youth organization. He headed up the first NCAA staff which implemented, administered and supervised the establishment of 22 programs across the country and planned further expansion.

Blanchard obtained his masters degree from San Diego State in 1981. He served as a specialist for the Social Advocates for Youth programs in San Diego in that same year. He then taught sixth grade students at Friendship Christian Schools in Raleigh before becoming executive director of Volunteers for Youth in Carrboro in 1982. He held that position until taking the job at Carolina in 1985.

Blanchard is married to the former Dawn London. They have a daughter, Janel, and a son, Shaun.



Rich Tuten

(Athletic Fitness Director)

Rich Tuten is in his second year as athletic fitness director at Carolina.

Tuten joined the Tar Heel staff in June of 1988 from the University of Florida. He had headed the Gator strength and conditioning program since 1980.

His major responsibility in Chapel Hill is to develop physical improvement programs for Carolina athletic teams. However, a great deal of his time is devoted to football.

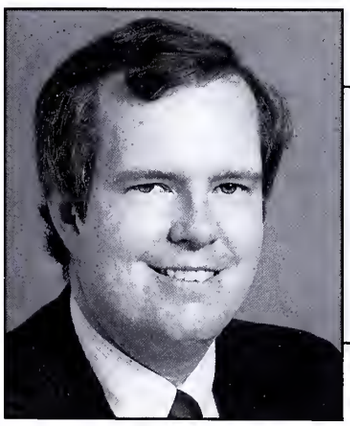
Tar Heel Coach Mack Brown has given Tuten credit for the fact his team is much stronger and faster this year than last fall. Tuten put the Carolina players through his off-season running and lifting program for the first time last winter and the results were impressive in the spring.

Tuten is a 1979 graduate of Clemson where he lettered three times in football and was a two-year starter at middle guard. He was named to the All-America Strength Team as a senior. He played one year with the Denver Broncos and one year in the Canadian Football League.

During the off-season Tuten worked as an assistant in the Clemson weight room before taking the job at Florida. His job in Gainesville included supervising strength and conditioning programs for men and women athletes, much as the one at Carolina does. He also had a number of other duties in the Gator football office.

Tuten is a member of the National Strength Conditioning Association. He designed Florida's current strength complex.

Rich and his wife, Donna, have two sons, Will and Matthew.



Chris Schleter

(Director of Athletic Photography and Data Processing)

Chris Schleter is heading into his eighth year as director of athletic photography and data processing at Carolina.

A 1977 Tar Heel graduate, Schleter is involved with a number of computer projects in the Athletic Department. He also records and processes game and practice films for the Carolina football team.

Schleter, a native of Garrett Park, Md., earned a masters of science degree in computer science in 1981 and since then has taken responsibility for several areas of computerization in the Department. He designs, develops and maintains computer programs and documentation for scouting, film record-keeping, academic progress of student-athletes and budget control for football and recruiting.

In addition to doing all the filming for football, Schleter also works with the scouting of opponents. A key part of eight bowl teams, including a stint as a football manager as an undergraduate, Schleter can be found at the Smith Center when not at his desk in Kenan Fieldhouse. He operates and maintains the color graphic message boards for all events in the arena from basketball games to concerts.

In all, this is the 16th year that Schleter has been associated with Carolina football in one way or another. He moved into his full-time position in July, 1982.

When not buried under his work, Schleter enjoys flying, golf, cross stitching and following the Washington Capitals.

Rick Brewer

(Sports Information Director)

Rick Brewer is beginning his 22nd year in the Carolina Sports Information Office and his 15th as its director.

Brewer is a native of North Carolina, growing up in Winston-Salem and Greensboro. He is a 1971 Carolina graduate with a degree in Journalism.

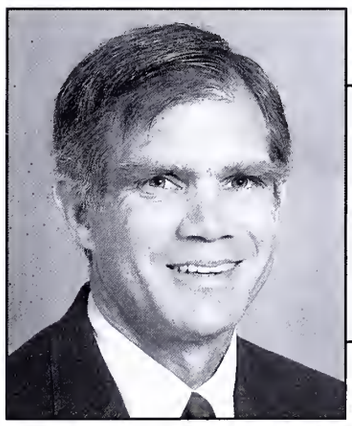
A student assistant in the sports information office for three years, Brewer was selected the school's first assistant SID upon graduation. He held that position for four years and then was named sports information director in 1975.

Brewer is directly in charge of publicity for Carolina's football and men's basketball teams. In addition, he oversees the publicizing of the University's entire 26-sport program.

In 1984 Brewer served as a press officer for the United States Olympic Committee at the Summer Games in Los Angeles. In that role, he served as a liaison between the media covering the Games and American athletes and coaches. He has handled similar duties at two USOC Olympic Festivals—at Indianapolis in 1982 and on the Carolina campus in 1987.

For the past seven years Brewer has been a member of the Media Coordination Committee which assists the media at the Final Four of the NCAA Men's Basketball Championships. He is a member of the Football Writers Association of America, the U.S. Basketball Writers Association, the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association and the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Brewer, a bachelor, is regarded as one of the world's finest parallel parkers and worst dancers.



Dan Hooker

(Head Football Trainer)

Dan Hooker is starting his first year as head trainer for Carolina's football team.

However, Hooker is no newcomer to Tar Heel athletics. He has been on the athletic training staff here since 1972 and has assisted with football for a number of years.

In addition to his work with the football team, Hooker will also continue to serve as coordinator of athletic training and physical therapy at Carolina. He has held that position since 1984.

A native of Danville, Va., Hooker's initial responsibility in Chapel Hill was to provide academic direction through the physical education department. He also served as head trainer for a number of Tar Heel teams, as well as assisting with football. He worked with three UNC lacrosse teams which won NCAA championships.

Hooker earned his Bachelor of Science degree in physical therapy from the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond in 1967. He also received a Master of Science degree in secondary education from the University of Southern California in 1971 and a Ph.D in education from Carolina in 1982.

Hooker and his wife, Sharon, have two sons — Sean and Stefan.

Dave Lohse

(Assistant Sports Information Director)

Dave Lohse is in his 11th year as assistant sports information director at Carolina.

Lohse's major responsibilities include editing the football game program and the men's basketball media guide. He also handles publicity for a number of non-revenue sports. He has won several national editing and writing awards from CoSIDA (College Sports Information Directors of America). His football program has been voted second best in the nation.

The U.S. Olympic Committee chose Lohse to serve as a press officer at last year's Summer Olympic Games in Seoul. He has also worked for the USOC at two National Olympic Festivals—in Houston in 1986 and on the Carolina campus in 1987.

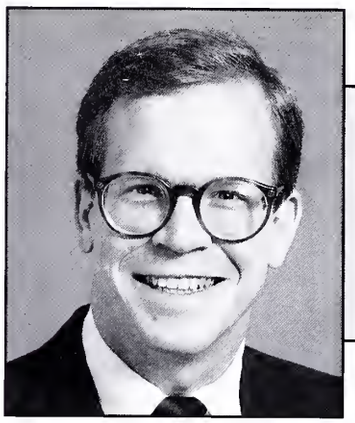
In his time at Carolina Lohse has coordinated publicity for seven Tar Heel teams which have won national championships—three in lacrosse and four in women's soccer.

A 1977 graduate of Purdue University, Lohse worked in the Boilermaker Sports Information Office for three years as a student assistant. He also was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa there.

Lohse spent two years as a graduate assistant in the Carolina Sports Information Office before being named assistant SID in August, 1979.

A native of Griffith, Ind., Lohse is a member of CoSIDA, the Football Writers Association of America, the U.S. Basketball Writers Association and the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association. He is a long-suffering Chicago Cubs fan.

Lohse is a bachelor.



Scott Jared

(Assistant Sports Information Director)

Scott Jared is beginning his fifth year as an assistant in the sports information office at Carolina.

Jared joined the Tar Heel athletic staff in the summer of 1985 after working in the sports information office at the University of South Carolina.

A native of Durham, N.C., Jared is a 1982 graduate of Tennessee Tech. He worked in the sports information office at Tech for two years, serving as SID on an interim basis during the 1982 football season.

He went to South Carolina in January, 1983 as a graduate assistant in the sports information office there. He handled publicity for the USC women's basketball teams for three years, edited several award-winning media guides and assisted with the publicity of other Gamecock athletic teams.

Jared's primary responsibilities in Chapel Hill are in the area of non-revenue sports. However, he also assists with the publicizing of the Tar Heel football and basketball teams. He is a member of CoSIDA (College Sports Information Directors of America) and the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association. In judging by CoSIDA, his 1986 Carolina golf brochure was selected as the best in the nation.

Jared is married to the former Heather Lee of Columbia, S.C.

The Educational Foundation

One of the most important organizations in the Carolina Athletic Department is the University's Educational Foundation.

It is the Educational Foundation which raises funds for athletic scholarships at Carolina.

These scholarships, either partial or full, will be awarded to nearly 400 student-athletes for the 1989-90 academic year, with an additional 100 awarded for summer school. The scholarship budget, which has more than doubled in the last eight years, will total $2.25 million this year.

"Since its founding in 1938, the Educational Foundation has provided scholarships, either partial or full, to over 5,000 student-athletes," says Moyer Smith, the Foundation's executive vice-president.

The purpose of the Foundation is to offer financial aid to worthy young men and women seeking an education at the University and to support University programs by providing services and funds for the construction of facilities or purchase of equipment.

The following are categories of annual giving:

Super Ram ($1,200)—Entitles a member to purchase up to eight season football tickets (selected location) and receive an assigned parking space. Football seating and parking will be in a preferred area.

Big Ram ($600)—Entitles a member to purchase four season football tickets (selected location) and receive an assigned parking space. Football seating and parking will be in a preferred area.

Ram ($300)—Entitles a member to purchase two season football tickets (selected location). Additional tickets may be purchased, but location of tickets is subject to the point system.

Little Ram ($150)—Entitles a member to purchase four season football tickets. However, location of tickets is subject to the point system each year.

Educational Foundation Member ($50)—Those who give less than $150 receive periodic bulletins and the option to purchase tickets. The minimum Foundation membership is $50 per year. However, contributions of any amount are welcome.

Carolina was one of the first schools in the nation to set up an endowment program for athletics. This program was started in 1968 and consists of $75,000 endowed scholarships set up through insurance, life memberships, wills and bequests and a pooled income program.

The Foundation operates on a dignified and realistic plane in compliance with all of the regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We couldn't have the type program we do without the Educational Foundation," says Athletic Director John Swofford. "We've enlarged our staff in the last several years and I think the staff additions we have made will enable us to do a better job for our members."

The Foundation offices are located at the Smith Center in the North end of the Koury Natatorium. This new office complex has helped tremendously in allowing the Foundation staff to better serve the membership.

Moyer Smith

Moyer Smith is in his third year as executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation.

Smith was appointed to the position in December of 1986, replacing Ernie Williamson. Williamson, who had held the job since 1957, is now heading the Foundation's endowment program.

A native of Lexington, N.C., Smith has been connected with Carolina throughout a good portion of his athletic career. He played halfback on Tar Heel football teams from 1958 to 1960.

Following graduation in 1961, he coached for six years in high schools in Winston-Salem, Albemarle and Lexington. He then returned to Chapel Hill to serve as an assistant on Bill Dooley's football staff for six seasons. He was head coach of the Tar Heel freshmen for three years, posting a 14-1 record and winning three straight Big Four championships.

He left Carolina in 1973 to join the coaching staff at Florida State, but returned the following year to become assistant athletic director for business. He was named associate athletic director two years later.

Before taking over Williamson's position, Smith served on the foundation staff for nine years. He worked as field secretary and then as vice-president for membership services.

Smith is married to the former Jane Webster of Lexington. They have two sons, Moyer, Jr. and Brent, and a grandson, Moyer Gray, III.

Kenan Stadium

Nestled among the tall pine trees near the center of the Carolina campus is Kenan Stadium. It is here in this beautiful natural valley that Tar Heel football teams have played their games for 62 years.

Kenan Stadium is generally referred to as one of the most beautiful football arenas in the country. Considering its majestic setting among the Carolina pines, many say it is the most beautiful.

Inside Sports magazine has rated Kenan one of the five best places in America to watch a college football game. For scenery, atmosphere and charm, it can't be surpassed.

The stadium has been expanded several times since its completion in 1927. In each instance, great care was taken to keep its basic beauty intact.

The most recent expansion took place prior to last season. That involved adding 2,000 choice seats between the 40-yard lines where the press box and chancellor's box formerly stood.

A new press box was constructed on top of the upper deck on the stadium's south side. It is a one-level elongated structure, running from 10-yard line to 10-yard line.

Also part of the project were a permanent lighting system, a chancellor's lounge on the north side of the field and a football lettermen's lounge and Educational Foundation lounge on the south side. The lights are a General Electric low-mount system which minimizes the height of the lightpoles. A similar system is used at Soldier Field in Chicago.

Cost of the entire project was $7 million. It was funded by private gifts and bonds.

"Our press and media facilities had been inadequate for a number of years," says Athletic Director John Swofford. "This project has addressed those needs very nicely. In addition, we have picked up some more seats in an excellent location.

"Kenan Stadium is aesthetically a very special sports arena and a great deal of thought was given to these improvements. Their aim is to maintain and even enhance the beauty of the stadium."

William Rand Kenan, Jr. deserves the credit for originally making the stadium a part of the University. He was born in North Carolina in 1873 and was an 1894 Carolina graduate. An international industrialist, Kenan discovered carbide and made monumental progress in the field of chemistry.

The stadium was built as a memorial to his parents, William R. Kenan and Mary Hargrave Kenan. Construction began in November, 1926 and was completed the following August. Complete cost of the stadium and accompanying fieldhouse was $303,000.

In the first game played there, Carolina defeated Davidson, 27-0, on November 12, 1927.

Carolina's all-time record in Kenan is 187-118-15. The most points scored by the Tar Heels in Kenan came in the third game played there. Carolina whipped Wake Forest, 65-0, in the 1928 season opener.

As originally built, the stadium seated 24,000. However, in later years the benefactor added portable stands and then an upper deck to the permanent stands, bringing capacity to 48,000. That was expanded to 50,000 a few years ago and then to 52,000 in 1988.

After the 1976 season, Kenan Fieldhouse underwent a massive renovation. The building was expanded to 30,000 square feet of dressing rooms, coaches' offices, lounges, meeting rooms, weight-training quarters and other facilities. The players' locker room was then renovated again in 1988.

A new addition to the fieldhouse, the Student-Athlete Development Center, opened in 1986. A 20,000-square foot building, it is a one-of-a-kind facility.

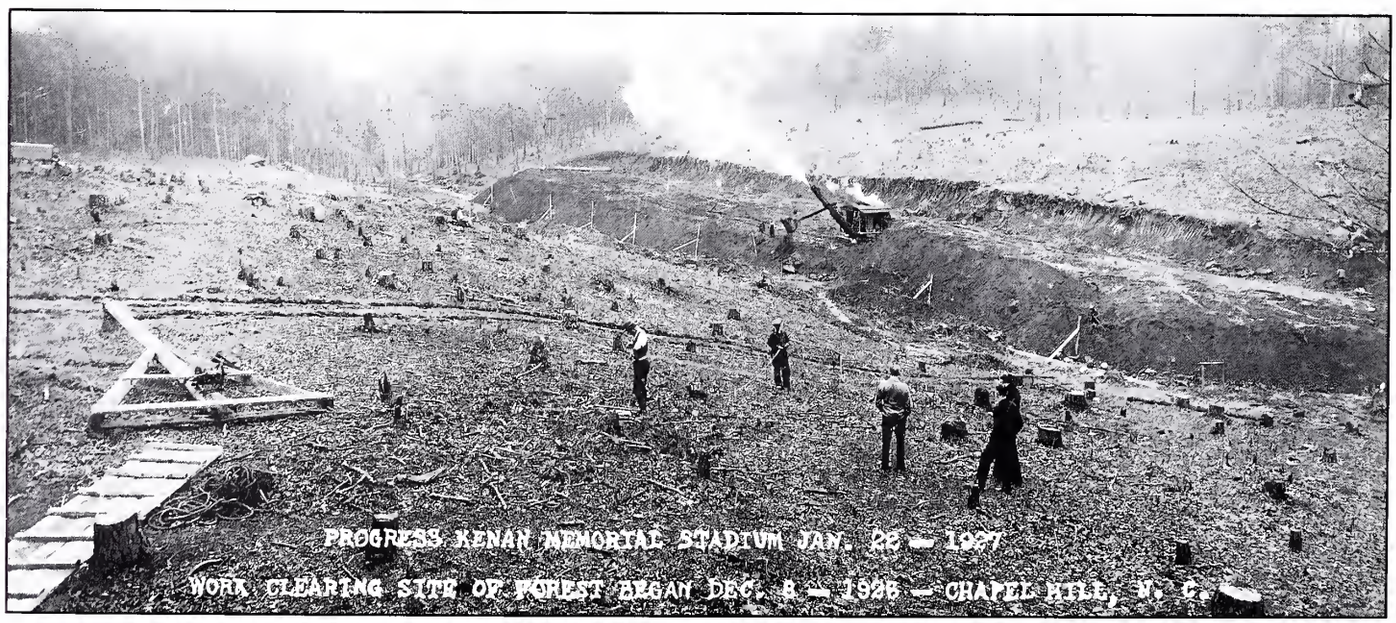
For study purposes, it contains a language laboratory, a video room, a computer lab, a theater-style lecture hall, several reading rooms and numerous tutorial rooms. Carolina's academic counseling staff has the advantage of using the most modern techniques in helping student-athletes with their studies.

The bottom half of the building is one of the finest strength fitness areas in the country. Workout rooms and performance laboratories contain the most current apparatus available.

Besides giving the stadium to the University, Kenan also sponsored and financed the famous Kenan Professorships. He was awarded the honorary degree of LL.D. by his alma mater in 1944.

Capacity crowds have come to be expected in Kenan. Highest attendance at a game there was the standing-room-only crowd of 53,689 which saw the Tar Heels play Clemson in 1983.

The 1983 season also saw another first in the stadium—a game played under artificial lights. The Carolina-Duke game was played in the late afternoon so it could be televised throughout the Atlantic Coast Conference area. Portable lights were brought in since the second half was played after sunset. Portable lights were also used in the 1987 Clemson game so it could be televised nationally by ESPN.



In January, 1927, work was just getting underway on Carolina's new football stadium.

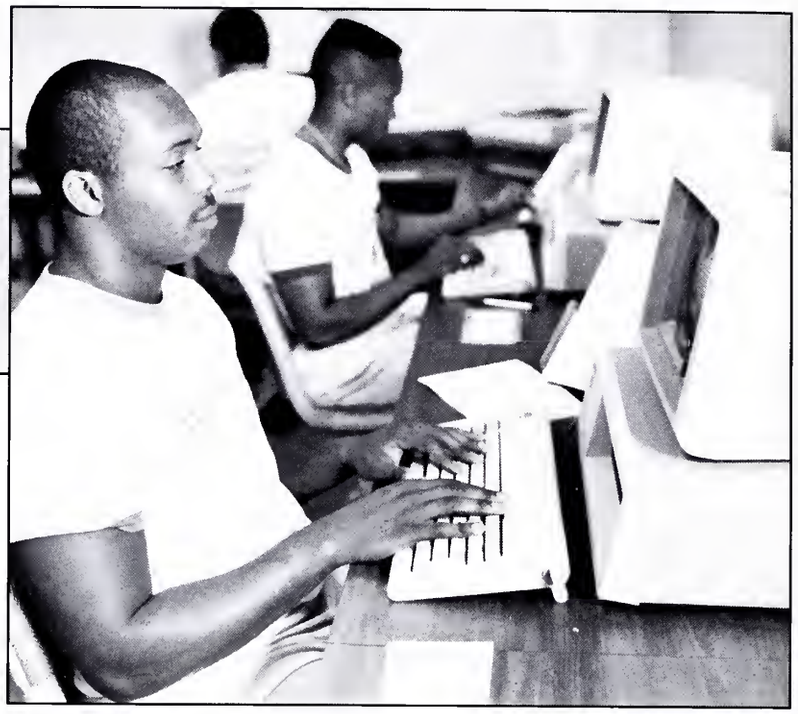
The Academic Support System



At the University of North Carolina, athletes are still first and foremost students. While most universities make that claim, Carolina has set out to prove it.

In October of 1986, North Carolina opened the doors to its brand new Student-Athlete Development Center, located at the east end of Kenan Stadium, adjacent to the fieldhouse. The Center is a 10,000 square-foot state-of-the-art academic facility that has set the standard for other universities to follow.

"The Department of Athletics has always been committed to academics," says John Blanchard, Director of Athletic Academic Affairs. "But they felt they needed to make a tangible sign of their commitment by putting in a building that could really serve the students, and they went about doing it in a first-class manner. They erected the best building of its kind in the country."

The academic center boasts an impressive array of facilities for the benefit of all Tar Heel athletes. Included in the building convenient to classrooms and dorms alike, are ten computers for the student-athletes to complete homework assignments and papers, several ample study rooms, a language lab with eight tape players used by the students to execute oral work for their foreign language classes, two conference rooms, seven tutorial rooms, a large classroom that can be divided into two smaller ones, and a 128-seat auditorium, used for seminars and lectures.

One seminar held in the auditorium is a Freshman Orientation and Learning Skills Program, required for all freshman athletes.

"When students struggle in college," says Blanchard, "ninety-five percent of the time that struggle is in their freshman year, and that's due to all the adjustments they need to make. We want to have a program that aids in those adjustments and minimizes the struggle.

"It involves getting our students fully acquainted with the University and the resources available to them. They learn about what we have to offer, the University advisory system, the University processes and procedures—everything that's available to them academically."

To further ensure that athletes will not run into early academic problems, Blanchard and his staff teach the freshmen necessary study skills, such as note-taking and time management, and all freshman football players are required to attend study hall every night Sunday through Thursday at the Center. On those nights, tutors are available to assist the student-athletes in a variety of subjects.

The building is open from 8 a.m. to midnight during the week, and from 6 p.m. to midnight on Sundays. During those hours, the facility is in almost constant use.

"Our students make great use of it," says Blanchard. "They use it for a variety of purposes, and they use it throughout the day."

Blanchard estimates that in any given week, at least half of the University's 600 athletes use the Center.

And the University's commitment to academic excellence is starting to pay off. Last spring, North Carolina received the CFA Honorable Mention Award for graduating at least 70 percent of the freshman football class of 1983 and was one of only 12 schools in the nation to achieve that mark. Blanchard is determined to make the honor an annual one in Chapel Hill.

Yet, Blanchard emphasizes that the Student-Athlete Development Center is only "one concrete way in which things have become better. The Department of Athletics also initiated moving the academic support program out of the Department of Athletics administratively, and into the College of Arts and Sciences. That has put us under the supervision of the University, which has been a very good move."

Under second-year Head Coach Mack Brown, the football program has renewed its resolve to provide the best education possible for its students.

"The football program is in a position now where we are really doing things to maximize the academic opportunities here," says Blanchard.

"Coach Brown has been very supportive and creative in developing academic standards for the team, and pressing the players to reach those standards. That's been very helpful to us as a program."

Without such a commitment to academic excellence, the Student-Athlete Development Center would be a meaningless structure. But with that commitment soundly in place at the University of North Carolina, the Center becomes a vitally useful tool for helping with the education of student-athletes—and for proving that "student" does indeed belong as a prefix to the word "athlete" in Chapel Hill.

The Athletic Fitness Program

As athletic fitness director at the University of North Carolina, Rich Tuten's primary job is to make believers out of Coach Mack Brown's football squad.

"The players have got to believe in your program," says Tuten, who is charged with running the strength and conditioning regimen for the Tar Heels. "They've got to know that if they follow the program, they'll eventually achieve their goals."

And Tuten is fortunate to have a first-class facility to help him in his endeavor. In 1986, a new 8,000 square-foot weight room was created as part of the Kenan Fieldhouse expansion project. The strength and fitness area contains a complete line of Nautilus equipment, cardiovascular machines and, by Tuten's estimate, over 20,000 pounds of free weight equipment.

"We have the facilities to do what we need to do," says Tuten, who came to Carolina in June of 1988, after spending eight years as the stength coach at the University of Florida. Since his arrival, Tuten has purchased over 11,000 pounds of free weight equipment for the Tar Heels.

While at Florida, Tuten experimented with Nautilus equipment, but found he prefers the free weights, and has instituted a training program for the football squad that relies almost solely on them.

"The Nautilus machines were a good program," explains Tuten, "but what I found is that while it helped me increase my strength and endurance, it was very mentally fatiguing. It got to the point that I wasn't looking forward to my next workout. Strength training should be an enjoyable part of your career in college football."

Towards that end, Tuten has instituted a program that has already been an enormous success. Typically, he explains, a team hopes to maintain 90 percent of its strength level during rigorous spring workouts. Last spring, however, the Tar Heels managed to actually increase their overall strength.

Tuten has implemented a computer program at Carolina to help in the strength training process. Each player is given his own personal strength chart to follow.

"On the computer, we save information on every player," says Tuten. "We can tell the computer exactly what we want to do—the intensity we want to work with, the number of sets and reps we want to work with and how heavy we want those sets and reps. Once the printout is done, it's very simple for the players to follow.

"Everything is mapped out for them. There's no guesswork involved. The computer prints out how much their poundage is—how much they should be able to do based on their level of strength, not on how good they feel on a given day. So it's a daily challenge for them to meet those poundages based on their level of strength."

In fact, the same system is used for every varsity sport at North Carolina. Football players operate on a four-day a week split routine program. On Mondays and Thursdays, the athletes concentrate on the chest, shoulders and triceps. On Tuesdays and Fridays, they work on the back, biceps and legs. Essentially, every member of the football squad goes through the same program, although there are some differences between the workout for backs and that for linemen. Ultimately though, every member of the team is treated the same.

"We treat everyone as a starter," says Tuten. "We feel every player is important, whether he's first-team or fifth-team. A fifth-teammer is very important in practice—and hopefully down the line, he will work himself up to playing. We need to get him as strong and well-conditioned as we can so he can help the team in practice. If you practice against a weak link, you're not well prepared for the competition that's coming."

There now appears to be a level of excitement in the weight room that perhaps was not present in past years. Players are anxious to test themselves.

"We have a very intelligent team," says Tuten. "More players are getting involved with the finer points of the program, instead of just coming in to lift and leave. We bring them in and show them their program on the computer. The more the players trust the program and see the results, the more they'll get into it."

Along with assistant strength coach Greg Saporta and two part-time assistants, Tuten is ultimately helpless if the players don't want to improve themselves.

"I can sit at my desk and write programs all day, but they've really got to be motivated to come in and actually do the program, and get their teammates involved," he points out.

"I don't think I could do this program without Greg. He's very dedicated. This is his life. Greg and I are here from six in the morning to seven at night. We're here to do whatever we need to do to help the team."

Commitment like that is certain to pay off for the Carolina football squad in the long run. With a top-of-the-line staff and a great facility, the Tar Heel strength and fitness program can go nowhere but up.

As Tuten says, "If you get past the point where you think you can't take another step and then you find you can take ten more, you can start building champion teams, because then they know they can go further than they ever thought they could."

1989 KEYDET OUTLOOK

Football at the Virginia Military Institute will have a new look this fall. First-year head coach Jim Shuck was named as the Institute's top football man January 3 after serving as offensive coordinator at Army the past two seasons under Jim Young. The wishbone, which has been successful at West Point, has been installed as the Keydets' new offense. Shuck searched for a new starting quarterback during spring practice and three candidates emerged as the leaders—sophomores Tony Douglas and Glen Buck and senior David Darden. The strength of the Keydet offense should be in the offensive line where four senior starters return. VMI will also have a new look on defense this year as a nose guard will be utilized in a multiple 50 set. The man in the middle of the defensive interior will be two-year starter Lionel Taylor. The leading returning tackler is two-year starting defensive end Jeff Barnes. Shuck must rebuild the secondary, however, replacing a quartet of players who ranked fourth in NCAA Division I-AA in 1988 in pass defense.

1989 WILDCAT OUTLOOK

Coach Jerry Claiborne, entering his eighth season at his alma mater and 28th overall as a head coach, has an experienced and deep team as he prepares for the 1989 campaign. UK returns 14 starters, seven on defense and seven on offense. Thirty-five lettermen return to Lexington this fall, while only 23 have departed. Glenn Fohr has graduated at the quarterback position, but senior Chuck Broughton, who played in nine games last season, does return. Five of the Wildcats' top six running backs from a year ago are also back, led by leading rusher Alfred Rawls. The offensive line is in good shape with all five starters returning and three other lettermen, too. The Kentucky defense will be led by second-team All-Southeastern Conference left tackle Oliver Barnett. Another top returnee is first-team All-SEC linebacker Randy Holleran, who led UK in tackles last season with 161 stops, including a school-record 102 solo tackles. Ken Willis returns as the Wildcats' placekicker, but a new punter must be found.

1989 WOLFPACK OUTLOOK

The return of 52 lettermen has N.C. State hoping for another strong team under Coach Dick Sheridan. The Wolfpack, 8-3-1 a year ago, has 13 starters back. That includes seven off an outstanding defensive team which gave up the eighth fewest yards in the nation. Top performers there are a pair of 1988 All-Atlantic Coast Conference selections—tackle Ray Agnew and strong safety Jesse Campbell. Campbell was the ACC Rookie of the Year last fall and also won all-league honors after leading the team in tackles and tackles for losses. Two other starters are also back in the secondary—Fernandus Vinson and Joe Johnson. Offensively, State's major losses were in the receiving corp. Gone are wideouts Naz Worthen and Danny Peebles and tight end Bobby Harrell. Four of five starters return in the offensive line and the backfield could be explosive. The Wolfpack returns its top three tailbacks and top three quarterbacks. State ended the spring with co-starters at quarterback—Shane Montgomery, a brilliant passer, and Charles Davenport, who excels in an option attack.

1989 MIDSHIPMEN OUTLOOK

Navy hopes its football fortunes are on the rise with the return of 14 starters from last year's 3-8 team. Those returnees and the fact the Midshipmen played their best games late last year against a slate of bowl-bound opponents have Coach Elliot Uzelac optimistic about the new season. Alton Grizzard, a two-year starter, returns at quarterback along with veteran Gary McIntosh and newcomer B.J. Mason. All are adept at running the Navy wishbone. Four starters are back in the offensive line and the running backs showed great promise in spring practice. Defensively, the Mids have an experienced secondary that ranked seventh in the nation last fall in pass defense. The defensive line should be improved although there is concern about middle guard Andy Kirkland, a leading All-East candidate, who missed spring practice with a back injury. Defensive back Bob Weissenfels and outside linebacker David Lowe could also contend for all-star honors.

1989 DEMON DEACON OUTLOOK

Wake Forest will be rebuilding in some key areas this fall as veteran coach Bill Dooley looks to find replacements for all-time Deacon passing leader Mike Elkins, three starting offensive linemen and over half of the 1988 defensive unit. Dooley led the Deacs to a 6-4-1 record last fall, the second winning record in as many years under his direction, and the first consecutive winning marks at Wake Forest since 1970 and 1971. Besides Elkins, other top losses include three of four starters in the defensive secondary and defensive ends Mike Hooten and David Braxton. Forty-one letter-winners do return, however, led by wide receiver Ricky Proehl. The wingback has caught 105 passes in the past two seasons and his 11 touchdowns tied for the ACC lead last year. 1987 All-ACC selection Mark Young returns at tailback for the Deacs. He led the team with 711 rushing yards last year and has 1,827 on his career. Another top returnee is place-kicker Wilson Hoyle whose 186 career points are only eight shy of the Deacon all-time mark.

1989 CAVALIER OUTLOOK

With 18 starters and 37 lettermen back from a year ago, Virginia should be a better football team in 1989. The could mean improvement on last season's 7-4 record and 5-2 Atlantic Coast Conference mark. Nine starters are back on offense and nine on defense. All five starters return in the offensive line. Top player there could be All-ACC guard Roy Brown, a three-year starter. However, the key man on offense is junior quarterback Shawn Moore, who established a school record for total offense last season with 2,526 yards. He finished second in the ACC in total offense, rushing touchdowns and touchdown responsibility. But, he will be missing the Cavaliers' all-time leading receiver, wideout John Ford. End Ray Savage heads the list of returning defensive starters. The entire defensive line returns intact, as does the secondary. Free safety Keith McMeans heads up the defensive backfield after tying for the ACC lead with five interceptions in 1988. The problem defensively is at inside linebacker where starters Jeff Lageman and David Griggs are missing.

1989 YELLOW JACKET OUTLOOK

Bobby Ross begins his third year at Georgia Tech in search of a new starting quarterback, some replacements for one of the nation's top defenses and the intangibles to help the Yellow Jackets turn their close losses of a year ago into victories in 1989. Tech managed just a 3-8 record last season, but the Rambling Wreck came within eight points of having a winning season and lost six games by a total of 32 points. Six starters return on offense for the Yellow Jackets, led by an All-America candidate at tailback in Jerry Mays. Mays is the leading returning career rusher in the Atlantic Coast Conference with 2,350 yards. Four of five starters return in the offensive line to open holes for Mays, but a replacement must be found for 1988's starting quarterback, Todd Rampley. A bright spot on offense is the return of seven lettermen in the receiving corps. A year ago, Tech ranked 15th nationally in total defense and seventh in pass defense, but five starters are missing off that defensive corp, including All-ACC standouts Willis Crockett and Cedric Stallworth. The Rambling Wreck defense should be led by inside linebacker Eric Thomas and the interior line where six players return. Both the punter and placekicker from a year ago have graduated, so the kicking game also looms as a concern.

1989 TERRAPIN OUTLOOK

With senior quarterback Neil O'Donnell running an explosive attack, Maryland could challenge for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship this fall. The Terps were only 5-6 last season, but return 18 of their top 22 players on offense and 15 of their top 22 on defense. The key man is O'Donnell who threw for 1,973 yards last year and completed 60 percent of his passes. At 6-3 and 220 pounds, he also is a running threat after rushing for 166 yards and three touchdowns in 1988. Two outstanding tailbacks also return in Mike Beasley and Ricky Johnson. Top man up front may be center Mark Agent. Major problem on defense may be in the secondary where three starters are missing. However, five of the front seven are back. That group includes linebacker Scott Saylor, the team's leading tackler. Linemen Larry Webster, Rick Fleece and Darren Drozdov have great promise. All-ACC place-kicker Dan Plocki will be missed, but the Terps do return punter Dan DeArmas.

1989 TIGER OUTLOOK

Despite the loss of 35 lettermen from last year's Atlantic Coast Conference championship squad, Clemson should again be one of the best teams in college football. The Tigers return 43 lettermen, including 11 starters, from that 10-2 unit. Certainly, there were some major losses. Gone are such stars as quarterback Rodney Williams, cornerback Donnell Woolford and offensive tackle Jeff Nunamacher. However, there is still enough talent on hand to keep Clemson among the nation's elite. Heading the list of returning players is tailback Terry Allen, who rushed for 1,139 yards last fall. Three new starters must be found up front, but there are two solid guards in Eric Harmon and Jeb Flesch. The big problem offensively is replacing Williams as quarterback. Free safety James Lott is the top returning player on defense. Five other starters are also back, including leading tackler Ed McDaniel, a sophomore linebacker. There is experience and depth at outside linebacker, but a lack of both in the defensive interior. The kicking game is solid with the return of Chris Gardocki.

1989 GAMECOCK OUTLOOK

South Carolina may have a new head coach in Sparky Woods, but the Gamecocks will have plenty of familiar faces on the playing field this fall. Nine starters are back from a record-setting offense, six are back on defense and both kicking specialists also return. That adds up to a lot of optimism in the Gamecock camp as Woods's first team will try to better last year's 8-4 record. The top returnee is quarterback Todd Ellis, who threw for 2,223 yards last fall. He has a trio of fine wide receivers back in Anthony Parlor, Carl Platt and Robert Brooks. Running back Harold Green provides a sound ground game and also led the team in catches last year. Defensively, the strength of the team could be up front where four starters are back. Tackle Marty Dye and ends David Taylor and Scott Windsor should be the unit's leaders. If a couple of young players develop at linebacker and in the secondary, the defense should be as good as ever. A big plus is the return of place-kicker Collin Mackie who has made 44 of 57 career field goal attempts and 63 straight extra points.

1989 BLUE DEVIL OUTLOOK

Duke posted its best record in 26 seasons last fall, going 7-3-1. Now with All-America wide receiver Clarkston Hines and two other All-Atlantic Coast Conference players returning, the Blue Devils will be shooting for their first back-to-back winning seasons since 1981 and 1982. Last year Duke led the ACC in passing and total offense and established school records in the process. Equalling those feats will be difficult, however, as a replacement must be found for quarterback Anthony Dilweg, the ACC Player of the Year. Dilweg had the seventh-best single-season passing yardage total in NCAA history last fall with 3,824 yards and also threw for 24 touchdowns. Transfer Billy Ray may be the man to fill his shoes. He will have a great target in Hines, who now has back-to-back seasons of 1,000 yards on receptions. Other top returnees are All-ACC tackle Chris Port, All-ACC tight end Dave Colonna and tailback Roger Boone, who led the league in all-purpose yards and receiving. Overall, Duke returns 16 starters, eight on both sides of the ball, and kicking specialist Doug Peterson.

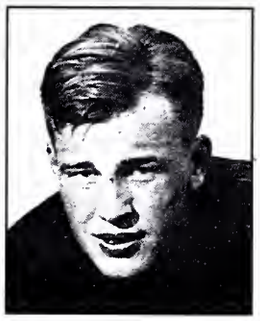
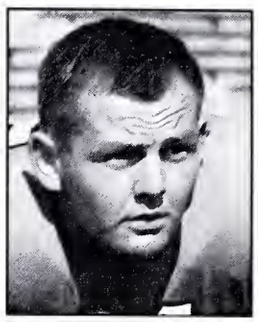
Carolina's First-Team All-Americas



George Barclay

Andy Bershak



Steve Maronic

GEORGE BARCLAY, GUARD, 1934

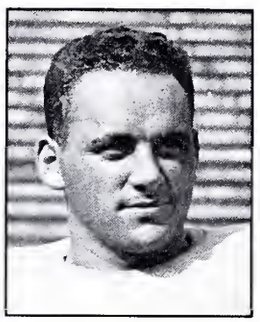
Here is Carolina's first football All-America. The 5-11, 185-pound guard and linebacker was a three-year standout for Chuck Collins and Carl Snavely. A fine blocker and an extraordinary tackler, Barclay lined up in the offensive interior next to tackle Jim Tatum. He was captain of the 1934 team which went 7-1-1. Barclay later served as head coach at Carolina for three seasons, from 1953 to 1955.

Andy Bershak, End, 1937

A 185-pound end, Bershak was a two-way performer for the Tar Heels. He was a fine receiver, but was even better on defense. He played two years for Carl Snavely and one for Ray Wolf. Bershak, an honor student, also was a basketball starter. He was selected to the Order of the Golden Fleece and served as president of the Carolina Athletic Association.

Steve Maronic, Tackle, 1938

Maronic was a two-way tackle for the Tar Heels and team co-captain in 1938. He was an "iron man," playing almost 60 minutes in every game that season. He turned in two of his best performances in front of the New York media against NYU at Yankee Stadium and Fordham at the Polo Grounds. Those games solidified his All-America chances. Maronic also was a place-kicker and hit 13 straight PATs in his final season.



Paul Severin

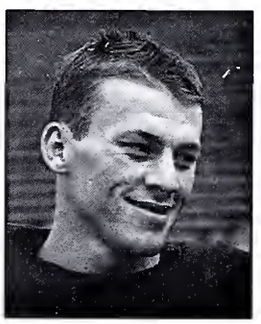
Ray Poole

Paul Severin, End, 1939-40

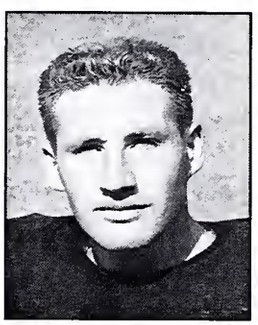
Severin was a two-time All-America selection by the Associated Press (1939 and 1940) and made most of the all-star teams in his senior season. His career was filled with big plays—a touchdown catch to tie Tulane in 1939, two scoring catches against Penn that same season and a touchdown-saving tackle from behind of Duke's great Steve Lach in a 6-3 win over the Blue Devils in 1940.

Ray Poole, End, 1943

Ray came to Carolina in 1943 as part of the Navy's World War II V-12 program. He had spent the previous two seasons at Mississippi and returned to Ole Miss after the war to finish his education. A 6-3, 215-pound end, Ray was a rugged defender. His brothers, Barney and Oliver, joined him at Carolina. Barney later earned All-America honors at Ole Miss in both 1947 and 1948.



Charlie Justice



Art Weiner

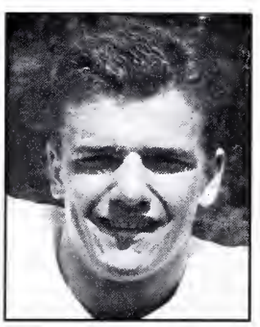
Charlie Justice, Halfback, 1948-49

Twice runnerup for the Heisman Trophy, Charlie Justice is rated by many as the best all-around player in the history of southern football. He was a true triple-threat performer, leading Carolina in rushing, passing and punting from 1946 to 1949. He sparked Tar Heel teams which appeared in the Sugar Bowl twice and the Cotton Bowl once. He is the school's all-time total offense leader with 4,883 yards and also ranks as the Tar Heels' second-leading career scorer, sixth-leading rusher and 10th-leading passer. He had a career punting average of 42.6 and averaged 14.2 yards on punt returns and 26.6 yards on kickoff returns.

Art Weiner, End, 1948-49

A great, all-around end, Weiner led the nation in receiving in 1949 with 52 catches. He had been seventh nationally in receiving the previous year with 31 catches. His 106 career catches are the second-most in school history and he still holds the Carolina career record with 18 touchdown receptions. However, many remember him best for a game-saving defensive play on the last snap of the 1949 Duke game. After his senior season, Weiner was named the most outstanding lineman in the Senior Bowl.

Ken Powell



Irv Holdash

Ken Powell, End, 1949

Powell teammed with Art Weiner to give Carolina sensational end play during the post-war "Justice Era" in Chapel Hill. A brilliant defensive player, Powell also caught 10 passes during the 1949 season. As a freshman, he had been a standout in the 1947 Sugar Bowl game with Georgia.

Irv Holdash, Center, 1950

While Carolina's football fortunes slipped in the years immediately following the Charlie Justice Era, Holdash still received national attention for his outstanding play. A center on offense and linebacker on defense, Holdash was a three-year regular who never missed a game during his varsity career. He probably made All-America in 1950 with a sensational performance in a 14-7 loss at Notre Dame. Irish quarterback Bobby Williams called him "the best I've played against."

Al Goldstein

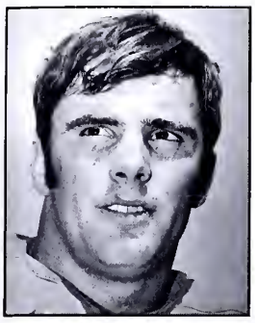
Bob Lacey

Al Goldstein, End, 1958

Goldstein was another outstanding two-way end at Carolina. He earned All-America honors in 1958 by making 24 catches for 490 yards, averaging an amazing 20.4 yards a reception. Adept at making the seemingly impossible catch, he had a 68-yard TD reception at Virginia. He also starred defensively and had a 46-yard interception return for a touchdown against Maryland.

Bob Lacey, End, 1963

Lacey led the Atlantic Coast Conference in receiving in 1963 with 48 catches for 533 yards. His pass-catching was a key factor as Carolina rolled to a 9-2 record, defeating the Air Force, 35-0, in the Gator Bowl. Lacey was also the team's top receiver in 1962 with 44 catches. He is the only Tar Heel player to have at least 40 catches on two occasions. His career total of 102 receptions is the third-best in school history.

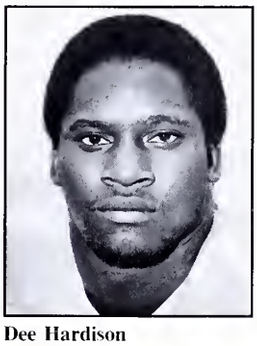


Don McCauley

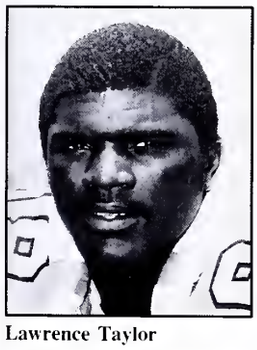
Ron Rusnak

Ken Huff

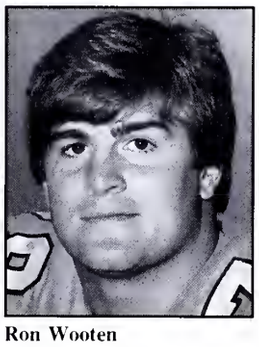
Charles Waddell



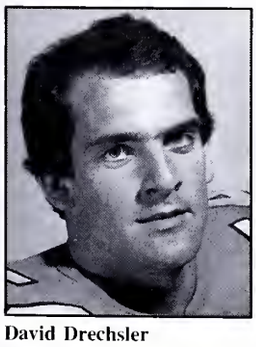
Dee Hardison



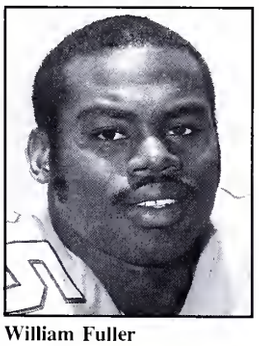
Lawrence Taylor



Ron Wooten



David Drechsler



William Fuller

Brian Blados

Harris Barton

Don McCauley, Halfback, 1970

Don McCauley shattered the Carolina and the Atlantic Coast Conference record books with a dazzling senior season in 1970. He rushed for 1,720 yards and scored 21 touchdowns, setting marks which still stand. His 1,720 yards rushing was an all-time collegiate high at the time, breaking O.J. Simpson's NCAA record. McCauley led the nation in all-purpose running that season. He was twice the ACC Player of the Year and still ranks fourth in both career scoring and rushing at Carolina. He had a lengthy professional career with the Baltimore Colts.

Ron Rusnak, Offensive Guard, 1972

Rusnak was a unanimous All-America selection in 1972 as Carolina posted an 11-1 record. At 6-2 and 220 pounds, he did not have the size to play professional football, but Rusnak was a great college player. He was a two-time All-Atlantic Coast Conference choice, starting on teams which combined for a 20-4 record. In 1972 he won the Jacobs Blocking Trophy as the best blocker in the ACC.

Ken Huff, Offensive Guard, 1974

Huff was a key man on one of the most explosive units in Carolina history. He was the leader of an offensive line which helped the Tar Heels accumulate 4,691 yards in 1974, at the time a school record. The 6-4, 255-pound Huff won the Jacobs Blocking Trophy as the best blocker in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Sparked in great part by his play up front, the Tar Heels had two backs rush for over 1,000 yards in the same season. Huff was the third player selected in the NFL draft by the Baltimore Colts.

Charles Waddell, Tight End, 1974

Waddell rates as one of the best all-around athletes in Carolina history. He won three football letters, two in basketball and one in track. Not only was he a fine receiver at tight end, but he also was a dynamic blocker there. He set a school single-game record in 1974 with three touchdown catches against Clemson. He had 41 career catches for 518 yards and seven TDs. His professional career was cut short by a knee injury.

Dee Hardison, Defensive Tackle, 1977

A two-time All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection, Hardison played on one of the top defensive teams in Carolina history. In 1977 Carolina led the nation in scoring defense, giving up just 7.4 points a game. The Tar Heels led the ACC in total, rushing, pass and scoring defense. A big reason was Hardison, a 6-3, 252-pound tackle who dominated the line of scrimmage all season. After leaving Carolina he began a lengthy NFL career with the Buffalo Bills.

Lawrence Taylor, Outside Linebacker, 1980

From midway in his junior season until the end of his senior year in 1980, Taylor dominated the football field as few defensive players ever had. Now regarded as the finest outside linebacker in the history of the game, Taylor had a remarkable senior season which featured 16 quarterback sacks and six other tackles for losses. In Carolina's only close games in an 11-1 season, Taylor made the game-saving defensive plays against Texas Tech and Clemson. He was a runaway selection as Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year.

Ron Wooten, Offensive Guard, 1980

Wooten won the Jacobs Blocking Trophy in 1980 as the best blocker in the Atlantic Coast Conference. He was the leading vote-getter in the offensive line on the All-ACC team. He was one of the leaders of an offensive line which helped the Tar Heels lead the ACC in total offense and which also helped produce two 1,000-yard backs. He is currently a starting guard with New England in the NFL.

David Drechsler, Offensive Guard, 1981-82

Drechsler became Carolina's first two-time All-America since Charlie Justice and Art Weiner when he earned first-team honors in 1981 and 1982. He played every position in the offensive interior during his Carolina career, but settled in at guard. The 6-4, 253-pound Drechsler played on Tar Heel teams which were 37-10-1 and were unbeaten in four bowl games. He also was the winner of a post-graduate scholarship from the NCAA. Drechsler went on to become a starter with the Green Bay Packers until a back injury forced him to give up the game.

William Fuller, Defensive Tackle, 1982-83

Fuller is one of just five Carolina players to win first-team All-America honors twice. Although powerfully built at 6-3 and 250 pounds, Fuller's greatest asset was his quickness. He used that quickness to make 13 tackles for losses and six sacks in 1982 and 17 tackles for losses and five sacks the following year. He was the only unanimous choice on the 1983 All-ACC team and is one of just two linemen ever to make All-ACC for three straight years.

Brian Blados, Offensive Tackle, 1983

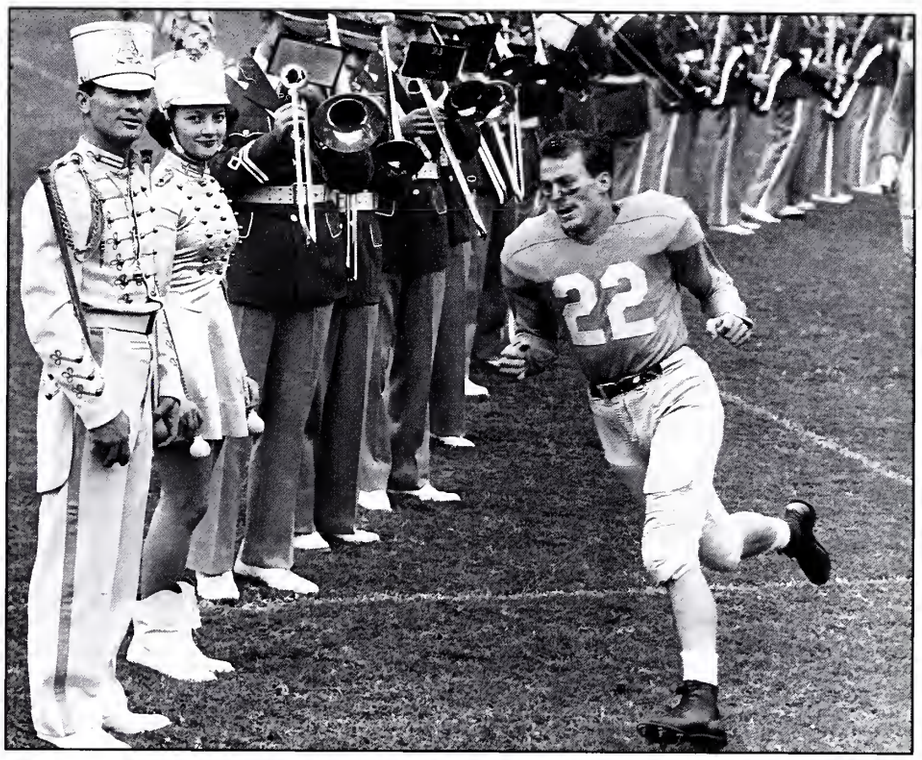
When two Carolina tailbacks ran for over 1,000 yards in 1983, much of that yardage came behind Blados. The 6-6, 305-pound left tackle dominated the line of scrimmage as Carolina set a school total offense record and finished seventh nationally in yardage. Blados was named on 90 of 100 ballots in voting for the All-Atlantic Coast Conference team. He was a first round choice by the Cincinnati Bengals in the NFL draft.

Harris Barton, Offensive Tackle, 1986

Barton was a four-year starter for the Tar Heels, first at center and then at tackle. With so many teams playing even-man front defenses, Barton was moved to tackle in 1984 to take better advantage of his skills. He excelled at left tackle, the key blocking spot in the Carolina passing game. As a senior, he led an offensive line which helped the Tar Heels rank first in the Atlantic Coast Conference and sixth nationally in total offense. An excellent student, he was chosen for a post-graduate scholarship by the National Football Foundation and was a first-round selection in the NFL draft.

Choo Choo

The Incomparable Charlie Justice



There is an understandable tendency by sports fans to be wary when an athlete is called "the absolute greatest ever" or "the best who ever played."

It is so difficult to compare athletes of the past with those of today that such descriptions are generally regarded as exaggerations of overzealous publicists.

Even with that in mind, however, it is undeniably safe to say that the greatest all-around football player ever to wear Carolina Blue was Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice.

Some have even said Charlie Justice was the best all-around player in the history of the South. We won't go that far even though there's a good chance it's true. We don't want to make our readers too wary.

Charlie Justice was more than just a great football player. He was a bonafide superstar...a hero...a legend in his own time. He had an impact on his home state as no other athlete had ever had before or few have had since.

During his four years in Chapel Hill, from 1946 to 1949, Justice helped guide the Tar Heels to three major bowl games. For one week during the 1948 season Carolina was ranked as the nation's number one college football team. The Tar Heels ended that year rated third, the best finish in school history.

It is no wonder then he was held in great esteem by everyone in the state. Certainly, the time was right for a hero like Charlie Justice. The war had just ended and people wanted to turn their attention to more pleasant things. They wanted someone to help them forget the trauma they had just suffered. So they looked for heroes and they found Charlie Justice.

In his book, They made the Bell Tower Chime, the late Bob Quincy summed up Charlie Justice's college career quite succintly. An excerpt is repeated here:

The Justice Era of 1946-49 was the most exciting in Carolina's football history. Charlie was the ringleader of a circus of thrills. He set the pace, but his backing was superb. Carl Snavely had so many football players he couldn't have named them all had he taken a memory course. The Tar Heels operated from the single wing with the kind of variations that at times resembled the Harlem Globetrotters' pregame ball-handling act. The four seasons netted 32 victories, seven losses and two deadlocks. Plus three major bowl appearances.

The 170-pound Justice was one of the nation's most sought-after players when he enrolled at Carolina. Some called him the hottest property in the history of football at that time. He had been a standout at Asheville's Lee Edwards High, leading the Maroons to two unbeaten seasons. He was All-Southern two years at Asheville, and as a member of the Shrine Bowl football team in 1942 he scored three touchdowns against South Carolina, a record that still stands.

The Navy became home for Charlie during the war years, and he became a phantom on a pro-studded Bainbridge Navy squad. After two years of romping for Bainbridge against opponents across the country, he was a target for pro offers from the Philadelphia Eagles and Washington.

Charlie wanted an education, and scouts stayed in pursuit. He chose Chapel Hill after seriously considering South Carolina and Duke. An off-hand remark by Snavely —"I hope he comes out for football"— became a classic understatement.

Justice was all his press clippings indicated —and more.

Smart! Example: In the Virginia Tech opener, Justice had two kicks blocked. He bristled and vowed it would never happen again. It didn't during his collegiate career.

After Virginia Tech's 14-14 stalemate, a shocker to say the least, the Tar Heels played at Miami. Early in the game, Justice went back to punt. The Hurricane came hard with an all-out rush to block him. He faked the kick and ripped off a 65-yard touchdown run.

In the Virginia game his freshman year he gained 170 yards in 17 carries with runs of 18, 40 and 56 yards. He had seen little practice because of a leg injury, but the Cavaliers were certain he carried a spare appendage.

Choo Choo (he acquired the name at Bainbridge when a gob remarked, "He runs along just like a choo choo train,") was excitement. He was all eagerness on the sidelines and all business when he moved into the tailback slot. He thrived on duty, and he was a master of the quick kick, a devastating rusher, a good passer, and a fake artist who could charm a cobra.

Jack Fitch, a thick-legged back who occasionally shared duty with Justice when not playing the wing, sized up Charlie's style by noting, "Justice has the ability to be running at full speed, stop suddenly, and then be back at full speed almost instantly. He was never regarded as fast in terms of a track man. He had a change of pace that couldn't be matched, and he knew how to follow blockers as well as any back I've ever watched."

Justice was blessed by having excellent blocking backs in front of him (Joe Wright, Don Hartig, Eddie Knox, Paul Rizzo, Bobby Weant) and two fullbacks in Hosea Rodgers and Walt Pupa who could pass as well as run. Pupa had been a tailback in pre-war years.

The Snavely system called for a spinning fullback, fakes and counter fakes, fullback pass plays and reverses. It was a dashing brand of football made more exciting by men who had the ability and maturity to accept Snavely's often complicated maneuvers.

A book, "Choo Choo," documents the career of Charlie Justice. He was a folk hero and deserved the special treatment.

The great Benny Goodman and the late Johnny Long recorded the Campbell-Beebe song, "All The Way Choo Choo." It sold by the thousands.

Typical of Justice was the Georgia game of 1948. He scored three times against the Bulldogs in a 21-14 triumph, the climax being an 84-yard punt return. At mid-way point that season, the Tar Heels were ranked No. 1 in the nation.

Justice erased more records than a company of auditors during his four years at UNC. He scored 234 points and passed or ran for 64 touchdowns. As a ball carrier he accumulated 2,634 yards.

His total offense record is still in the books at 4,883 yards. His punting average for four years was 42.6 yards per kick for 231 boots. Justice also was a dependable defensive player, going both ways on occasion for the Tar Heels and also as a Redskin.

Justice seemed to peak when the traditional games were being played. He led the Tar Heels to four straight wins over Duke. He was an All-America mention as a freshman and made many of the major teams as a junior and as a senior. He was runner-up for the Heisman Trophy to Doak Walker of SMU in 1949.

Charlie's finest moment came in the College All-Star Game of 1950 at Chicago's Soldier Field. He was voted the MVP of the game for good reason. The All-Stars walloped the Philadelphia Eagles, led by Steve Van Buren, 17-7. Justice gained 133 yards individually, or 48 more than the Eagles posted as a team. He set up a touchdown on a 60-yard pass from Eddie LeBaron of College of Pacific.

Every year since Charlie's departure from Chapel Hill, someone has a "find" who is labeled as "the next Charlie Justice." No player has yet come up to Choo Choo's standards. Good runners, yes! Expert passers, yes! Booming punters, yes! But for endurance, ability to dazzle the crowd and overall quality, there was only one Charlie Justice.

Carolina Football — A Brief History

By Dave Lohse, Assistant Sports Information Director

A program rich in a legacy of legendary coaches and heralded athletes, North Carolina football embarks on its second century of gridiron greatness in 1989.

The nation's first state university was also the first to play football in the state of North Carolina. Having played its first game in 1888, Carolina celebrated its football centennial last season. The first 100 years were something very special and there's plenty of reasons to believe the next 100 will be equally grand. Some of the most lauded coaches in the history of the game have stalked the sidelines of Kenan Stadium. And they have tutored some of classiest and talented athletes to ever play the traditional fall game. Together, they have helped establish Carolina's football program as the preeminent one in the state and one of the most successful and recognizable in the entire South.

Surprisingly, football is actually not the oldest varsity sport at UNC. Baseball is accorded that honor, having fielded its first varsity nine back in 1867. But while football started 21 years later, its history is replete with memories that have thrilled legions of Carolina fans as the decades elapsed.

The first UNC team competed back in 1888 and played but two games, losing both and being outscored 22-4. That inauspicious beginning belies the success of the program since then, but those football pioneers are nevertheless credited with starting football at Carolina.

In the fall of 1888, the sophomore class at UNC had formed a team and after vanquishing all the other classes at UNC, began to look around for stiffer opposition. The UNC team challenged the Wake Forest eleven to a game which was scheduled during the State Fair in Raleigh on October 18, 1888. Wake won the game 6-4 in what came to be acknowledged as the first intercollegiate football game in the history of the state of North Carolina.

Later that same fall, Carolina challenged Trinity (now Duke) to a Thanksgiving Day contest in Raleigh that drew a crowd of 600 for a 16-0 Trinity triumph. One member of that 1888 UNC team was John Motley Morehead, who went on to great fame as the founder of Union Carbide and who endowed the Morehead Scholarship program and several buildings on the Carolina campus.

Just a few months after that loss to Trinity, UNC acquired the services of Hector Cowan, former great tackle and captain at Princeton, to help teach the UNC players the fundamentals of the game. Cowan arrived in February 1889 and drilled the Tar Heel troops on the existing athletic field, located on the current site of Bynum Hall.

The 1889 team played two games in the spring and two in the fall. On March 1, 1889, Carolina earned its first win in football as it routed Wake Forest 33-0 before a crowd of 500 in Raleigh. UNC went on to post a 2-2 record that year and earn a share of the state championship with Trinity and Wake Forest.

After a Carolina player suffered a broken collarbone that fall, the University faculty voted to discontinue the sport of football in January 1890 and Carolina did not compete at all the following fall. That is one of only three years since the start of football in 1888 in which the Tar Heels have not fielded a team, the other years being during World War I.

The following year, students petitioned to have football restored at UNC and the ban was lifted with the help of Professors Horace Williams, F.P. Venable and Eban Alexander. At this time, athletic control passed from the hands of students to the faculty, a situation that has continued on through today.

Football returned to UNC that fall with W.P. Graves as coach and UNC compiling an 0-2 record.

The following year, 1892, is considered by most to be the first year of real football at UNC with a representative six-game schedule. That squad also earned the distinction of being UNC's first really good team. Mike Hoke acted as team captain and the entire squad consisted of just 15 players with UNC using only one substitute the entire season. The team opened the year with a 40-0 rout of Richmond and after a loss to Virginia in the next game, it went on to win its last four. Carolina's 5-1 mark was the best record in the South that year. 1892 also marked the first year in which University teams were referred to as "Carolina," with the appellations "University" and "Chapel Hill" being dropped from the popular vernacular.

A meeting in February 1893 signalled the start of the formation of what would become the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association in later years. Ten schools, including UNC, were involved in the meeting and Dr. Venable was voted temporary chairman of the group. Later that same year on May 12, the UNC athletic association approved the awarding of varsity letters for the first time.

Although the 1893 team managed only a 3-4 record, it did have the distinction of being the first Southern team to play in New York City as Carolina lost a 34-0 decision to Lehigh on November 25, 1893. A year later, Carolina brought in Vernon K. Irvine from Prineeton as the coach and he led Carolina to a 6-3 mark, attesting to the fact that good and regular coaching benefitted the team's performance. That UNC team finished second in the South and won the state championship. It was also the first to be forced to stage closed practices because of problems with crowd control at open sessions.

In 1895, T.C. "Doggie" Trenchard came from Princeton to coach the Tar Heels and he led UNC to an outstanding 7-1-1 season marred only by a loss to Virginia. A crowd of 12,000 was on hand for the meeting between the Tar Heels and the Cavaliers in Richmond, which UVa won 6-0. Twice during the game spectators ran onto the field to block the path of Tar Heel runners who had broken into the clear on apparent touchdown runs.

Carolina began to gain some consistency in the sport of football with the arrival of Will A. Reynolds of Princeton as head coach in 1897. Reynolds produced four winning Carolina teams in his four-year tenure at Chapel Hill. His first squad in 1897 went a formidable 7-3 and was followed in 1898 by what is still the only unbeaten, untied team in school history. That 1898 squad was a perfeet 9-0 and outscored its opponents by an amazing 201-8. The team finished the season by beating Virginia for the first time in six years, 6-2, in Richmond.

Reynolds' final two teams also posted respectable records, going 7-3-1 in 1889 and 4-1-3 in 1900.

Reynolds yielded the coaching reins after the 1900 season to Charles Jenkins, who led UNC to seven straight wins prior to a pair of season-ending losses. Carolina beat all of its state opponents to win its seventh state championship since 1892. In this season, letters began to be awarded by an advisory committee of the athletic association. Previously, anyone who played had lettered.

The next 11 seasons saw nine different head coaches. The 1905 Carolina eleven was coached by William Warner, the brother of the famed "Pop" Warner.

Trenchard returned as Carolina coach in 1913 for a three-year run. His 1914 squad was outstanding. Sixty men reported for the team and UNC went on to win its first 10 before losing to Virginia 20-3 before a record crowd of 15,000 in Richmond. That UNC team outscored its opponents 359-42 and became the first team in the South to display players' numbers on their jersies.

Trenchard's 1915 squad did not fare as well, finishing the campaign with a 4-3-1 mark. Seven regulars missed the VMI game and the rookies did not fare well, fumbling 16 times en route to a 3-3 tie. That same year, Trenchard started the first athletic training table at UNC in his home, feeding the 56 squad members on a daily basis.

The year 1916 found the Tar Heels in a new home as Carolina began to play its games at Emerson Stadium, the site of the current Davis Library. Freshmen were banned from varsity participation for the first time this year and the team went 5-4 and won its sixth successive state championship.

All of the members of the 1916 squad had entered the military service in World War I by the following fall and varsity football was dropped for the second time in UNC history, this time for a two-year hiatus.

Carolina made its full-fledged return to the gridiron in 1919, going 4-3-1 under coach Thomas J. Coleman. Carolina twice broke its single-game home attendance record that year as it won the state championship. The Tar Heels defeated N.C. State, 13-12, before a crowd of 7,500 and then topped that with 9,000 in a 6-0 win over Virginia. That game marked the first time the Cavaliers had ever played in Chapel Hill.

The 1920 campaign was a dismal one as UNC went 2-6 and scored only 16 points in eight games. But a new, more positive era in North Carolina football began a year later with the hiring of Bill and Bob Fetzer as co-head coaches. This also marked a change in athletic policy at UNC as the Fetzers were offered long-term positions instead of the usual one-year contracts. Carolina went 5-2-2 under the Fetzers in 1921 and 10,000 filled Emerson Field for Carolina's 7-3 win over Virginia.

That year also marked the first for UNC's participation in the Southern Intercollegiate Conference. At a February 25, 1921 meeting in Atlanta, the SIC was formed with a 16-school membership. The conference agreed to bans on post-season play, freshman eligibility and athletic training tables, required eligibility forms for players and disallowed organized practice before September 10.

Carolina would go on to have great success in the Southern Conference, tying for the league crown in 1922 and winning outright in 1934, 1937, 1946 and 1949.

The Fetzers' greatest team was probably the 1922 edition which posted an impressive 9-1 mark, won the South Atlantic championship and tied for the Southern Conference crown. That team lost only to Yale, 18-0, and had three touchdowns called back by penalities in the game. The squad was ranked 11th in the nation by I.B. Thomas in the January 1923 issue of Intercollegiate Athletics and played before a record 68,500 fans during the course of the campaign.

The 1923 team was ravaged by injuries but limped through to a 5-3-1 record and a state championship for a second straight year. A year later, the Tar Heels were only 4-5 but they did play before their largest crowd to that date, 25,000 at New Haven's Yale Bowl in a 27-0 loss to the Bulldogs.

The 1925 season would prove to be the Fetzers' last as co-coaches. The Tar Heels responded with an excellent season, going 7-1-1 and winning the state championship. The only loss came at the hands of Wake Forest. A crowd of 16,000 jammed Emerson Field (capacity 2,400) to see the Heels and Virginia play to a 3-3 tie in the season finale.

1926 brought a new era to Carolina football as Chuck Collins came on the scene as head coach. He had the longest tenure (eight years) of the early Carolina coaches. Collins, who was one of the seven mules for Notre Dame's Four Horsemen, served as Carolina's coach from 1926 through 1933.

The 1926 season brought onto the scene the infamous Kay Kyser, later to be a renowned Big Band leader, as head cheerleader and his Cheerios as the first major organized cheer block at Carolina. New stadium plans were also in the works in 1926. Carolina alumni in Durham and Chapel Hill met on May 24, 1926 to form the Durham Stadium Committee. On November 13 of that same year, William Rand Kenan, a New York City engineer and 1893 UNC football letterman, gave the University a gift of $275,000 to help build the stadium.

The first game was played in Kenan Stadium on November 12, 1927 with UNC beating Davidson 27-0 before a crowd of 9,000 fans. The following Saturday, UNC beat two-touchdown favorite Duke 18-0 in Kenan. The stadium was officially dedicated on Thanksgiving Day 1927 with 28,000 attending as Carolina edged Virginia 14-13. John Sprunt Hill officially made the presentation of the stadium to Governor A.W. McLean who accepted on behalf of the University and state.

Carolina won its first state championship since 1925 during the 1928 season. Its 5-3-2 record that year included a 65-0 win over Wake Forest in the season opener. That still stands as the largest margin of victory in UNC history. President Calvin Coolidge attended the Carolina-Virginia game in Charlottesville that year and saw the Tar Heels pull out a 24-20 win. It was the first time a U.S. president had ever attended a game in the South.

Quarterback "Sweet" Jim Lalanne (93) and end Paul Severin, a two-time All-America in 1939 and 1940.

Collins' first great team was the 1929 edition which went 9-1 and outscored its opponents 346-60. The only loss of the year came to Georgia and only Southern California scored more points during the course of the season. Ray Farris was the captain of that UNC team and was a unanimous All-Southern Conference choice at guard. Carolina was called the "Team of a Million Backs" and drew a record attendance of 139,500.

The 1931 team coached by Collins went 4-3-3 and won the state championship. The Duke-Carolina game went big time for the first time that year as a crowd of 20,000 in Durham watched the two teams play to their second straight scoreless tie. Johnny Branch, a great all-purpose runner, was the star of that squad.

The quiet Dutchman, Carl Snavely, came to Chapel Hill in 1934 from Bucknell to take over the reins of the Tar Heels. It would be the first of two tours of duty for Snavely as head coach. The 1934 team went 7-1-1 and was led by George Barclay, UNC's first recognized All-America in football, at guard. Carolina lost only to Tennessee and tied N.C. State that season. The Carolina-Duke game drew state and Kenan record crowds as the Tar Heels eked out a thrilling 7-0 victory.

The 1935 team also proved to be a great one as Snavely led his squad to an 8-1 record. Carolina won its first seven of the season and there was talk that the Tar Heels were headed to the Rose Bowl. But arch-rival Duke made sure that didn't happen on Saturday, November 14 in Durham as the Blue Devils played an errorless game, winning 25-0. That game at Durham drew a new Southern attendance record of 47,000 and in total 149,500 saw UNC play during the course of the year, another record. After losing to Duke, UNC came back to pummel Virginia 61-0 and ended up eighth in the final Associated Press rankings. Ace passer Don Jackson was named a second-team All-America.

Ray Wolf came to Carolina in 1936 to coach after Snavely had gone on to Cornell. Wolf had six successful seasons at UNC, producing winning teams the first five. The 1936 team went 8-2 and lost only to Tulane and Duke. That squad was led by end Andy Bershak, who was a second-team All-America in 1936 and a first teamer a year later. Wolf's teams continued their success, going 7-1-1, 6-2-1, 8-1-1 and 6-4 in subsequent years. Some of Wolf's outstanding players were Jim Lalanne, Paul Severin and George Stirnweiss.

The World War II years were an unsettled time in Carolina athletic history. From 1942 through 1944, UNC had three different head coaches who put makeshift teams through the paces against adjusted schedules which included some military teams. Jim Tatum, an outstanding player at Carolina in the 1930's, coached the 1942 unit. He would return for another coaching tenure later.

Snavely returned to Chapel Hill in 1945 and during the next five years produced some of the best teams in Carolina football history. His 1948 team finished third in the AP poll, the highest final ranking ever for the Tar Heels.

An Omaha, Nebraska native, Snavely was a 1915 alumnus of Lebanon Valley College. He had coached Carolina teams in 1934 and 1935 to a 15-2-1 record and returned in 1945 after nine years at Cornell.

His 1945 team did well, finishing 5-5 after winning only one game the previous season. Then the incomparable Charlie Justice arrived a year later, and with his compatriots, UNC went to three major bowl games and won two Southern Conference title in the period from 1946-49.

Snavely's 1946 team was 8-2-1, won the Southern Conference championship and lost to Georgia, 20-10, in the Sugar Bowl. The 1947 team was probably the best of the four. It finished 8-2, winning its last seven, but went uninvited in the post-season. The 1948 unit had only a regular-season tie with William & Mary to mar its record. It went on to lose to Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl. Finally, the 1949 team was unbeaten in the conference and finished 7-4 overall, losing to Rice in the Cotton Bowl.

Justice was not the only star of those Snavely teams. Art Weiner and Ken Powell were tremendous ends on those teams and Hosea Rodgers was a great rugged fullback of the era.

But Justice was the main attraction unquestionably. He ran and passed for over 5,000 yards in his four-year tenure and he averaged over 42 yards a punt for his career. He had only two punts blocked and both of those were in the first game of his freshman year. When he was done after the 1949 season, Justice had established NCAA records in total offense and punting and was considered the greatest punter of all-time.

As a triple-threat All-America halfback, Justice captured the imagination and fancy of the football fan as no one else ever had. He was idolized and the attention he received from the fans and the media was almost unheard of in that time.

A native of Asheville, he had served in the Navy in World War II and was already 26 years old by the time of his senior year in 1949. He capped his amazing career by being named the Most Valuable Player in the 1950 College All-Star Game in Chicago.

The departure of Justice from campus coincided with a 20-year drought in UNC's football fortunes. Snavely, despite all his earlier successes, could not produce a winning team after the Justice era. George Barclay, Carolina's first All-America player back in 1934, was brought in as head coach, but he encountered little success in his three years of running the program. That's when Carolina successfully lured Jim Tatum back to the fold. Tatum was a great UNC player in the 1930's and had coached the Tar Heels during the war in 1942. He had since been at Maryland where he led the Terrapins to the national championship in 1953.

Tatum returned to Chapel Hill in 1956 and after a 2-7-1 record that year, produced back-to-back 6-4 records. It appeared Carolina had the corner turned when Tatum died suddenly in the summer of 1959 from Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. He was replaced by assistant Jim Hickey whose teams did not meet with a great deal of success in his eight seasons as head coach. Hickey produced only one winning record, that in 1963 when the Tar Heels finished 9-2 and shared their first Atlantic Coast Conference title. That team went on to post the school's first win in a bowl game, a 35-0 decision over Air Force in the Gator Bowl. That 1963 squad was led by the running of Ken Willard, the passing of Junior Edge and Gary Black and the pass receiving of Bob Lacey. Linebacker Chris Hanburger was a stalwart on defense for the Tar Heels.

After Hickey, UNC looked to Bill Dooley to revitalize its football fortunes. The choice proved to be a wise one. Dooley's teams won 69, lost 53 and tied two in his 11-year tenure. ACC championships were won under Dooley in 1971, 1972 and 1977. Bowl trips became a regular feature—six in all during the Dooley years.

After three rebuilding seasons, Dooley's first great team was in 1970. It finished 8-4 and went on to play Arizona State in the Peach Bowl. Tailback Don McCauley, who had gained 1,092 yards rushing in 1969, returned for a 1,720-yard season in 1970. He was the first of UNC's 19 1,000-yard rushers. The Garden City, N.Y. native's 1,720 yards in 1970 broke what was then O.J. Simpson's single-season NCAA rushing standard.

Dooley's teams won back-to-back ACC title in 1971 and 1972. The '71 team lost to Georgia 7-3 in the Gator Bowl in a matchup of coaching brothers, Vince Dooley being the head mentor of the Bulldogs. The 1972 team had an 11-1 record marred only by a loss at Ohio STate. It won a thrilling 32-28 decision from Texas Tech in the Sun Bowl.

Carl Snavely got a victory ride after Carolina bombs Texas, 34-7, in the 1948 season opener.

The mid-1970's brought more success as UNC made bowl appearances in 1974 (Sun), 1976 (Peach) and 1977 (Liberty). Sammy Johnson was a 1,000-yard rusher for Carolina in 1973 and James Betterson in 1974. But the outstanding offensive player of this time was Mike Voight who gained over 1,000 yards in 1974, 1975 and 1976, including 1,407 yards in '76. Voight was named the ACC Player-of-the-Year in both 1975 and '76 for his efforts.

The 1977 team would prove to be Dooley's last at UNC. It won the ACC title and earned a berth opposite Nebraska in the Liberty Bowl. A rugged defense led by All-America tackle Dee Hardison helped Carolina lead the nation in scoring defense that season. UNC allowed only 81 points in 11 regular-season games. The new offensive star was a freshman tailback named Amos Lawrence who rushed for 1,211 yards and was named ACC Rookie-of-the-Year.

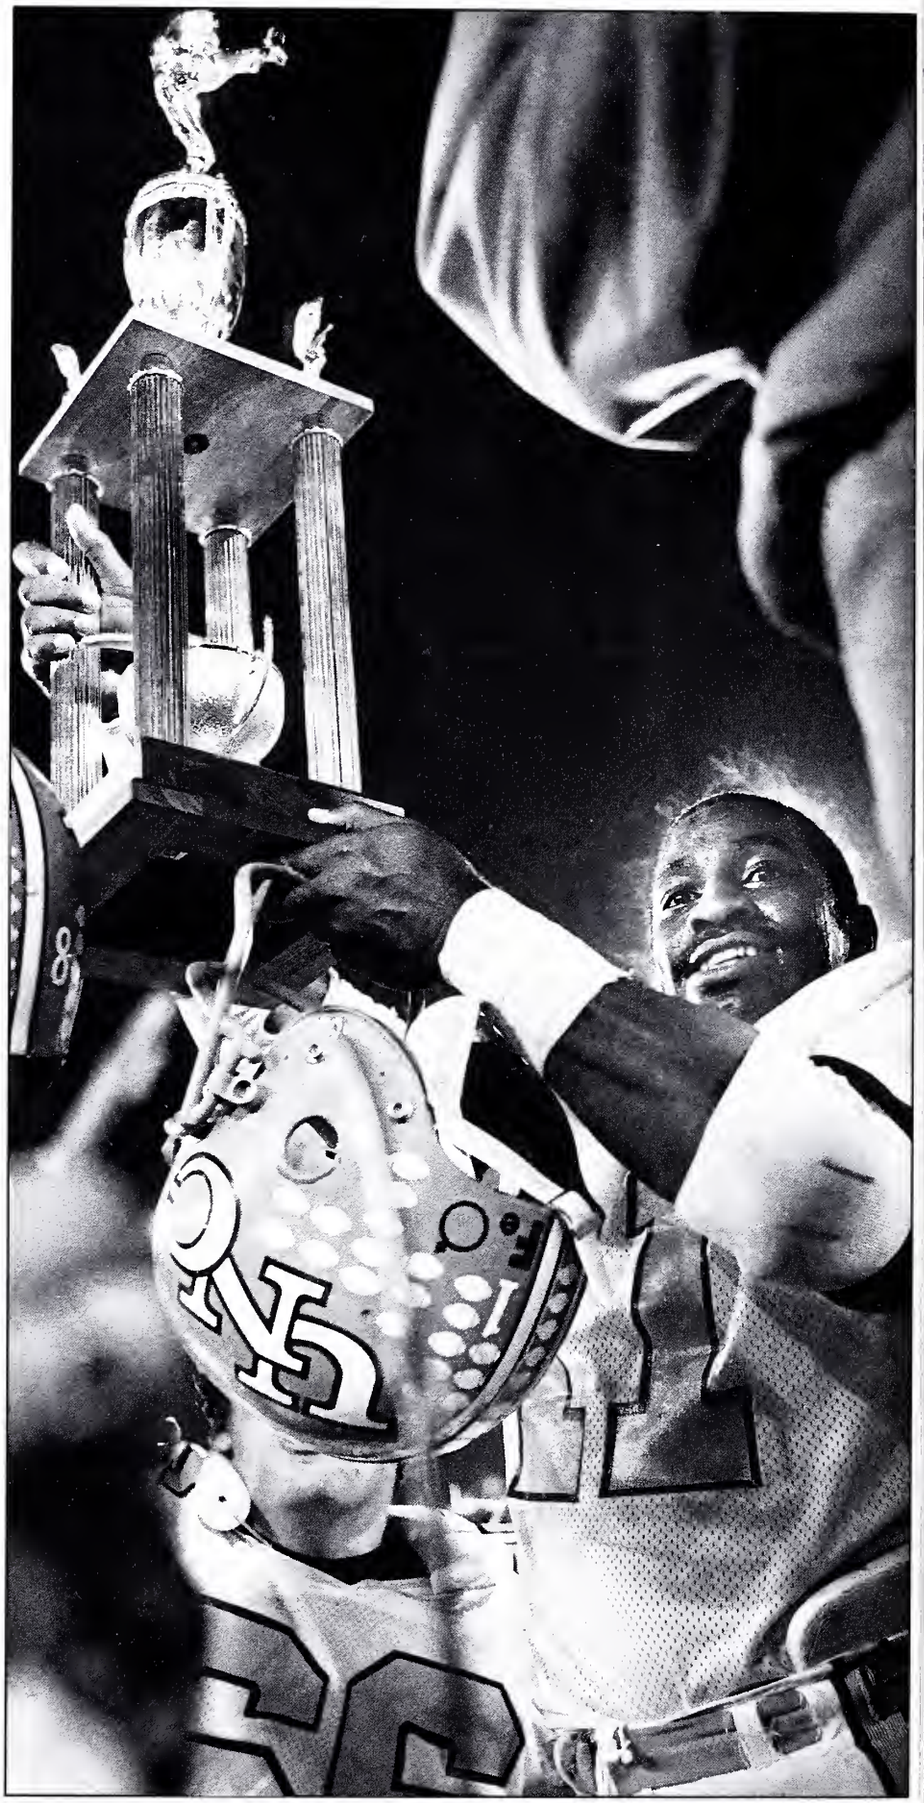
Dooley resigned in January 1978 to accept the dual role of head football coach and athletic director at Virginia Tech. At that time Carolina turned to the "Cradle of Coaches" at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, to find its new head coach, Dick Crum.

Crum had just completed a brilliant four-year run as head mentor at Miami. His 10-year run as head coach at UNC was equally brilliant. The winningest coach in Tar Heel history, he compiled a 72-41-3 ledger at the UNC helm. He took six of his 10 UNC teams to bowl games, winning on four occasions, and the 1980 squad won the ACC championship.

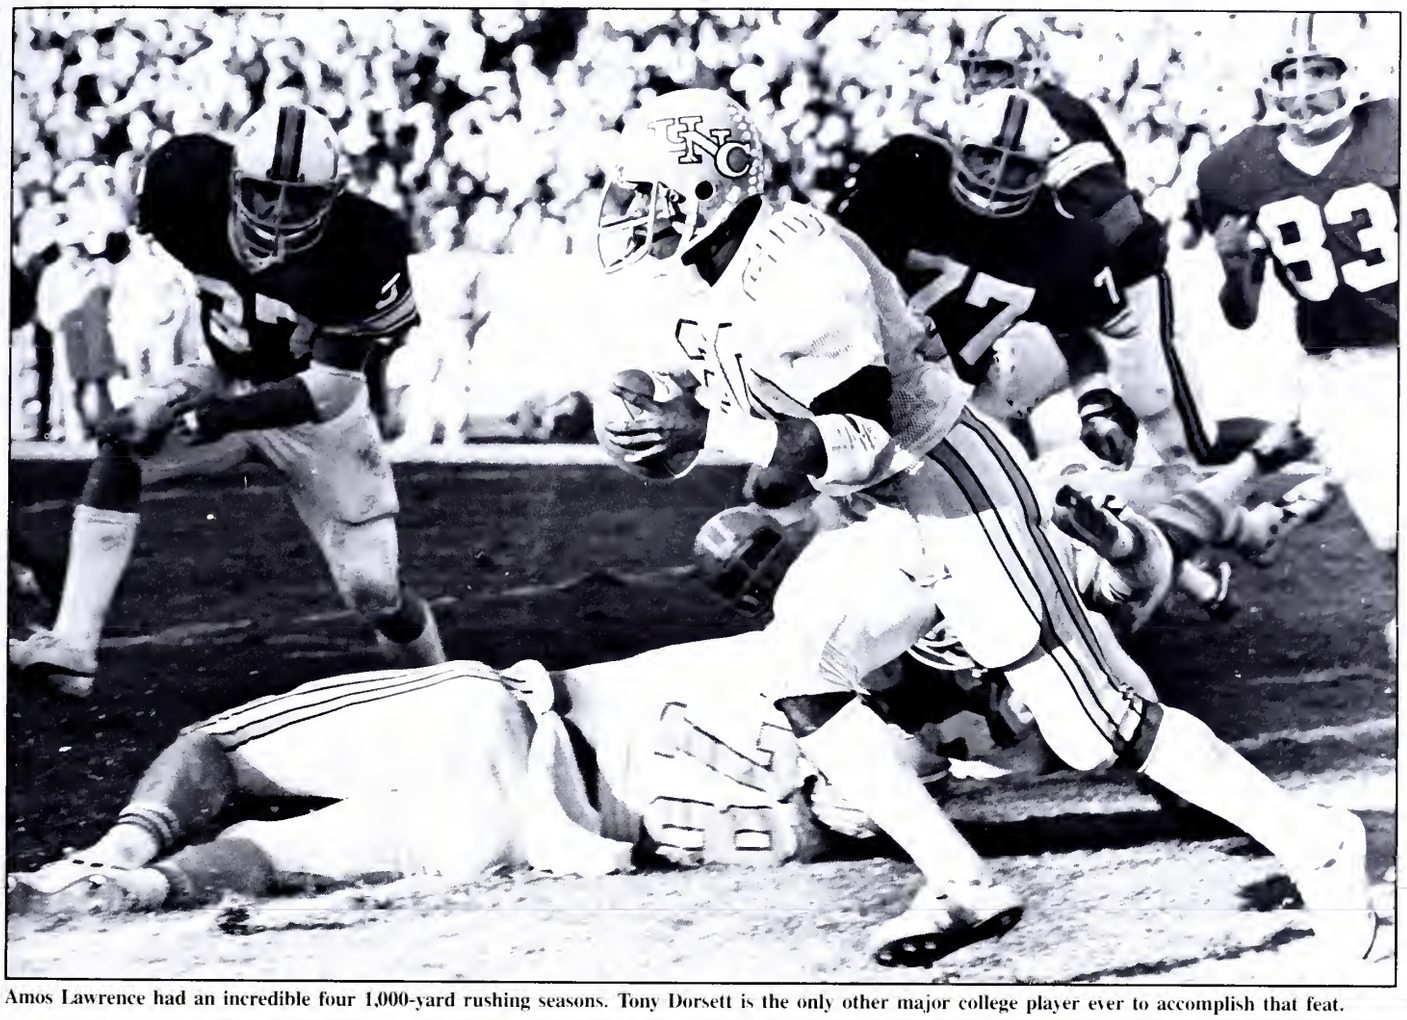
After a 5-6 record in 1978, Crum's teams from 1979 through 1983 went to five successive bowls and won 45 games in that time, an average of nine per season. UNC posted four consecutive bowl wins over national football powers in that time frame, beating Michigan in the 1979 Gator Bowl, Texas in the 1980 Bluebonnet Bowl, Arkansas in the 1981 Gator Gowl and Texas again in the 1982 Sun Bowl. No other team in ACC history has won four successive bowl games.

In 1980 and 1981, UNC became the first team in league history to finish in the Top 10 of both wire service polls in successive years. The 1980 team was 11-1 and ranked ninth by United Press International and 10th by Associated Press. The 1981 unit was 10-2 and rated eighth by UPI and ninth by AP. Two more Carolina teams coached by Crum would later go to Bowl games, the 1983 team to the Peach Bowl to face Florida State and the 1986 corps to the Aloha Bowl for a meeting with Arizona.

There was a plethora of outstanding players at Carolina during the Crum era and the Tar Heel football record book was being constantly updated. In 1980, linebacker Lawrence Taylor was named the ACC Player-of-the-Year and he has gone on to all-pro status with the New York Giants.



Defensive back Ricky Barden was presented the 1979 Gator Bowl Trophy moments after the Tar Heels toppled mighty Michigan, 17-15.



Amos Lawrence had an incredible four 1,000-yard rushing seasons. Tony Dorsett is the only other major college player ever to accomplish that feat.

That season, Taylor led what was one of the great defenses in ACC history. Other great defensive players of recent years at UNC include linebacker Buddy Curry, defensive tackle Donnell Thompson, linebacker Darrell Nicholson, defensive back Steve Streater, defensive tackle William Fuller and outside linebacker Mike Wilcher. All of those players were All-ACC selections and several went on to distinguished pro careers. Fuller made four first team All-America squads in 1983.

Although Crum's teams were known for their rugged defense, Carolina also excelled offensively, leading the ACC in total offense four times in the 1980's and ranking sixth nationally in 1986.

There were several reasons behind the offensive fireworks. First, there was a succession of outstanding running backs. Five different players gained 1,000 or more yards rushing in a season a total of 10 times under Crum's tutelage. After his brilliant freshman year, Lawrence went on to gain 1,000 yards three more times. He and Tony Dorsett are the only two runners in college football history to gain 1,000 yards rushing each of their four seasons. Kelvin Bryant, now with the Washington Redskins, overcame an injury-marred career to gain 1,000 yards on three occasions. Ethan Horton turned the trick twice in his career and both Tyrone Anthony and Derrick Fenner had one 1,000-yard rushing season.

A second reason behind UNC's offensive success was the presence of some outstanding offensive linemen in the 1980's, four of whom gained first team All-America status—guard Ron Wooten in 1980, guard David Drechsler in 1981 and '82, tackle Brian Blados in 1983 and tackle Harris Barton in 1986. Wooten, Blados and Barton are all currently starters in the National Football League.

Carolina's offense also became more diversified in the Crum era and the passing section of the Carolina record book was basically rewritten in this time by a string of accomplished starters at quarterback—Matt Kupec, Rod Elkins, Scott Stankavage, Kevin Anthony and Mark Maye.

At the conclusion of the 1987 season, Crum resigned to return home to his native Ohio where he is now head coach at Kent State University. Carolina conducted a national search to find a successor to lead the Tar Heels into their second century. The unanimous choice of the search committee was a 37-year-old native of Cookeville, Tenn., Mack Brown, who came to Carolina after head coaching tenures at Appalachian State and Tulane. He is considered nationally as one of the finest young minds in the game, a brilliant motivator and communicator.

Brown's first season at the helm of the Tar Heels was admittedly a disappointing one. Carolina suffered through a 1-10 season replete with near-miss losses. But some individual stars did shine for Carolina.

Senior center Jeff Garnica carned third-team All-America honors, was named All-Atlantic Coast Conference and won the Jacobs Blocking trophy as the best offensive lineman in the ACC. Junior Pat Crowley won All-ACC honors at offensive guard for a second successive year as well.

The blocking of those two players were instrumental in sophomore tailback Kennard Martin leading the ACC in rushing with 1,146 yards. Martin thus became the 19th 1,000-yard rusher in North Carolina history, an NCAA record in that category. Southern California ranks second with 17 all-time 1,000-yard rushers.

Despite the rigors of his first campaign, Brown has become a very popular figure already in Carolina athletics for his outgoing personality and the wide-open offense he chooses to employ. And there are few long-timc observers of UNC football who don't agree that it's just a matter of time before Carolina football fortunes are on the rise again.

Carolina's 1,000-Yard Rushers

1,000 yards.

That's the magic figure for any runner in football.

Call him a halfback, a running back, a tailback, an I-Back or whatever you want. But, when he rushes for 1,000 yards, you simply call him something special.

Nowhere in college football have there been more special runners than at the University of North Carolina.

In the last 20 years Tar Heel tailbacks have rushed for over 1,000 yards on 19 occasions. That gives Carolina more 1,000-yard backs than anyone else in collegiate history.

The University of Southern California has produced seventeen 1,000-yard rushers. That's the second-highest total in the game and puts the Tar Heels and the Trojans well ahead of everyone else.

In a 12-year period from 1973 to 1984, Carolina had at least one player break the 1,000-yard mark each season.

Three times in that 12-year stretch, the Tar Heels had two tailbacks get 1,000 yards in the same season. It has been rare in college football for a school to produce two 1,000-yard backs in one year. When it has happened it has generally been with option attacks—the veer or the wishbone. But, on all three occasions when Carolina has had a pair of 1,000-yard rushers, the players actually shared the same position—tailback in the Tar Heels' I-formation.

Tailback at Carolina, in fact, has become the glamour position in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Year in and year out, more attention goes to Tar Heel tailbacks than to players at any other position at any other school in the league. To be a tailback at Carolina, one has to be a superb athlete, one of the nation's best players, someone special.

How has Carolina been able to produce so many 1,000-yard backs?

Certainly, having outstanding runners has been a major factor. But, other schools also have had great backs and haven't been able to compile the figures of Carolina. For example, the Tar Heels have had more 1,000-yard rushers that Alabama, Notre Dame and Penn State combined.

No, there are also other reasons, the most important of which are probably fine offensive linemen, belief in the I-formation and tradition. Those reasons also hold true for Southern California.

Carolina and USC have each had two players rush for 1,000 yards three times—Mike Voight and Kelvin Bryant of the Tar Heels and the Trojans' Charles White and Anthony Davis.

In addition, Carolina's Amos Lawrence had an amazing four 1,000-yard seasons. He and Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett are the only major college players ever to hit the 1,000-yard mark four times.

The biggest difference between the tailback systems at Carolina and Southern Cal is that Trojan backs have generally had higher yardage totals. But, USC usually picks one player as its tailback and sticks with him throughout the season. In fact, Southern Cal has never had two backs gain 1,000 yards in the same season.

Carolina, on the other hand, has alternated tailbacks quite a bit, trying to keep a fresh player in the game at all times. When two players split a position, their individual yardage totals obviously aren't as high as those of runners who stay in the game constantly. The Tar Heel philosophy is simply that if you've got two great runners, let them both play. In the long run, both will be more effective.

That's not to say Carolina would never go with a system like USC's. If one runner is clearly better than all others, he will get the majority of the playing time. For example, Don McCauley rushed for 1,720 yards in 1970. At that time that broke O.J. Simpson's all-time NCAA single-season yardage record. Still, McCauley's backup, Ike Oglesby, had 562 yards.

McCauley is Carolina's only 1,000-yard back from outside the ACC's geographic area. He is a native of Garden City, N.Y.

Bryant, Tyrone Anthony, James Betterson, Ethan Horton, Sammy Johnson and Kennard Martin are all North Carolinians. Lawrence and Voight grew up in Virginia, while Derrick Fenner is from Maryland.

All except Martin have played professional football. McCauley and Bryant have had the most success to date. McCauley played with the Baltimore Colts for 11 seasons and broke many of the club's rushing and scoring records set by Alan Ameche and Lenny Moore. Bryant was the USFL's Player of the Year in that league's first season. He joined the Washington Redskins in 1986.

Horton and Johnson were recruited as quarterbacks. All of the others were high school halfbacks, although McCauley was more highly regarded as a defensive back.

Those players have turned in some of the greatest individual performances in ACC history. In fact, Carolina players have had the five best rushing days in league history. Fenner set the ACC rushing record in 1986 by gaining 328 yards against Virginia. Martin had 291 last fall against Duke. Lawrence has the third-best figure with 286 against Virginia in 1977. Fourth on the ACC list is McCauley's 279 against Duke in 1970. Then comes Voight's 261 against the Blue Devils in 1976.

Top single-season efforts ever in the ACC have been McCauley's 1,720 yards in 1970 and Voight's 1,407 in 1976.

It has been performances like those which have made Carolina's tailback position what it is—a spot filled with tradition, a spot for special players, a spot for 1,000-yard rushers.

The Linebacker Tradition

The most dynamic defensive player in the National Football League is Lawrence Taylor, the sensational linebacker of the New York Giants and another in a long line of standouts at that position from the University of North Carolina.

Three seasons ago Taylor captured pro football's most prized award when he was named the NFL's Most Valuable Player. That award came after he led the Giants to a Super Bowl triumph. The MVP trophy gave Taylor a sweep of the NFL's top individual honors in just his sixth year in the league.

Taylor roared into the NFL in 1981 as few rookies ever have. He not only was the league's Rookie of the Year, but also the NFL Defensive Player of the Year as well. In his eight seasons with the Giants he has established himself as the outside linebacker with whom all others must be compared.

Of course, Taylor's success has come as no surprise to those who followed his great career at Carolina.

And the fact Taylor played for the Tar Heels was no surprise to NFL fans. Carolina has been turning out star linebackers for years.

The biggest star of them all may well be Taylor. The second player chosen in the 1981 NFL draft, he actually helped turn the Giant franchise around. New York, which had only a 4-12 record in 1980, improved to 9-7 in Taylor's first year there. The Giants made the playoffs for the first time since 1963.

The major reason for that improvement was an outstanding defense featuring Taylor. The New York offense wasn't great by any means, but the defense was strong enough to offset that. Quick and powerful with tremendous instincts, Taylor presented a major problem for opposing offenses. He actually re-defined the outside linebacker position.

In his first year in the league, Taylor received more votes than any other NFC player in balloting for the Pro Bowl.

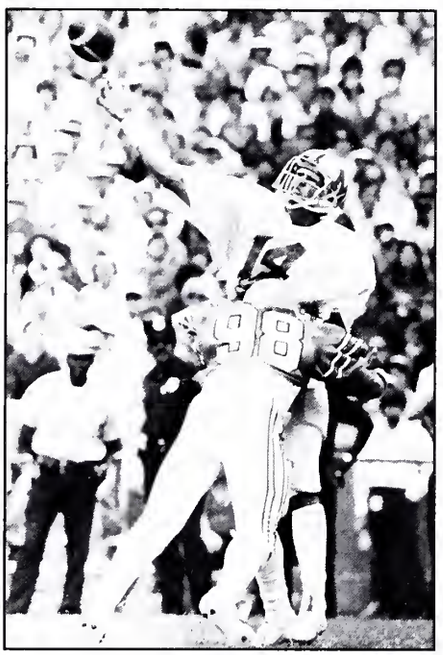
Taylor has been an All-Pro selection in all eight of his NFL seasons and has also been in the Pro Bowl each year. Four times he has been named Defensive Player of the Year.

Taylor had similar success at Carolina. He was a consensus All-America and the Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year in his senior season. During that fall of 1980, he led a Tar Heel defense which helped Carolina post an 11-1 record, equalling the most wins in school history.

Taylor had really begun to develop into a true super-star late in his junior year. He finished third on the team in tackles that fall, had five sacks and made six tackles for losses. Then he was sensational against Michigan in the Gator Bowl.

That set the stage for a dynamic senior season in which Taylor seemed to make big plays every week. He had 55 solo tackles, 16 sacks and six tackles for losses. He forced three fumbles, recovered three and made plays that had to be seen to be believed. Even then instant replay would have been helpful.

However, as mentioned earlier, Taylor was not the first Tar Heel linebacker to reach stardom in the NFL. The year before Taylor entered the league, the NFL's best rookie linebacker was Buddy Curry of the Atlanta Falcons. Curry had won All-ACC honors at Carolina in 1977 and 1979. He was a key figure, as just a sophomore, on a 1977 Tar Heel defense which gave up the fewest points in the nation.



Lawrence Taylor has made plenty of hits like this.

Two former Carolina linebackers helped their teams reach the Super Bowl in the 1970's. Chris Hanburger sparked a Redskin defense which took Washington to Super Bowl VII. John Bunting was a key performer for the Philadelphia Eagles when they reached Super Bowl XV.

While Hanburger and Bunting were two of the NFL's premier linebackers during the 1970's, two of the league's best in the Sixties were also former Tar Heels—Rip Hawkins of the Minnesota Vikings and Bill Koman of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Like Curry, Hanburger and Hawkins were two-time All-ACC choices during their college days. Jimmy DeRatt, a Carolina linebacker in the early 1970's, also won all-conference honors twice.

Other Tar Heel linebackers who have made the All-ACC team since 1970 are Bunting, Taylor, Bill Richardson, Mike Mansfield, Darrell Nicholson, Lee Shaffer, Chris Ward, Mike Wilcher, Micah Moon and Brett Rudolph.

Wilcher is one of the NFL's best young defenders today. He has become a Pro Bowl player for the Los Angeles Rams and ranks as one of the best outside linebackers in the game. In other words, people are comparing him to Lawrence Taylor, the best who's ever played.

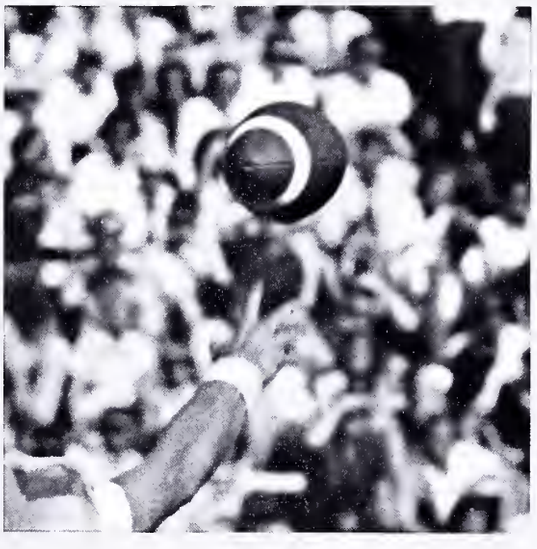
The First Forward Pass

While is is foolish to state emphatically that the first forward pass was thrown by a North Carolina football team, certain records would indicate as much. No less an authority than John Heisman himself credits the Tar Heels with the game's first pass.

The scene was Atlanta on October 25, 1895. Carolina and Georgia were locked in a scoreless struggle in the game's closing moments. The Tar Heels were in a punting situation deep in their own territory. Here is an account of what then happened as reported by Heisman in a 1928 edition of Collier's Weekly:



"The North Carolina fullback retreated until the crossbar of his goal was above his head and from the Georgia stands came the exhortation to 'block it, block it, block it.'

"And Georgia's forwards, gathering all their waning strength and riding over North Carolina's tired defense might have blocked it and even scored had the sturdy boy from North Carolina kicked.

"But instead of punting into the leaping bodies of those onrushing Georgians, he ran a few mincing steps to the right. Raising the ball to his shoulder he tossed it.

"Luck was with the boy. The ball was caught by a North Carolinian. Now as we know forward passes, it wasn't much. It traveled a few yards and laterally as well as forward. It may have appeared to the spectators that it had been knocked from the fullback's hands.

"At any rate the lad who caught it ran 70 yards for a touchdown!

"I had seen the first forward pass in college football. It was illegal, of course. Already Pop Warner, the Georgia coach, was storming at the referee. But the referee had not seen the North Carolina lad, goaded to desperation, toss the ball. A touchdown had been made and a touchdown it remained."

Other accounts of the game do not mention the forward pass. However, George Stephens is credited with a 70 - yard touchdown run in the game.

At any rate, Heisman wrote that he immediately saw the possibilities that the forward pass had. He personally wrote Walter Camp about the play.

The forward pass was discussed for several years. It became a part of the rules at Camp's suggestion in 1906.

Certainly, the idea of the pass had to come from something. It may well have been Carolina's strange play in 1895.

Carolina's Bowl History

North Carolina has played in 16 post-season bowl games, including 12 in the last 19 years.

Carolina's post-season trips have been to the Sugar Bowl in 1947 and 1949; the Cotton Bowl in 1950; the Gator Bowl in 1963, 1971, 1979 and 1981; the Peach Bowl in 1970, 1976 and 1983; the Sun Bowl in 1972, 1974 and 1982; the Liberty Bowl in 1977; the Bluebonnet Bowl in 1980; and the Aloha Bowl in 1986.

The Tar Heels' bowl history started in the late Forties when Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice was running wild from the single wing. Carolina went to bowl games three times during the Justice Era, but lost all three.

Perhaps the most famous of those games was the 1947 Sugar Bowl which matched Carolina against Georgia. The game produced one of the most controversial plays in bowl history. Carolina was leading 7-0 in the third period when Bulldog defensive end Joe Tereshinski intercepted a Tar Heel pass. He then flipped a lateral to Dick McPhee who raced to the Carolina 14.

The Tar Heels argued the lateral was a forward one and the play should have been called back. However, the officials ruled differently. Georgia went on to score and eventually won the game.

Carolina returned to the Sugar Bowl two years later and lost to Oklahoma, 14-6. Justice had a great day for the Tar Heels, clicking off runs of 10, 13, 25, 11 and 14 yards. He punted four times for 65, 65, 57 and 53 yards.

Justice had another great day in the 1950 Cotton Bowl, but Carolina lost to Rice, 27-13.

The Tar Heels' next bowl appearance came in the 1963 Gator Bowl where Carolina walloped the Air Force, 35-0. Ken Willard was the big star that day. He ran for 94 yards on 18 carries and scored the first touchdown which keyed the runaway victory.

In the 1970 Peach Bowl the Tar Heels dropped a wild 48-26 decision to unbeaten Arizona State. All-America tailback Don McCauley had 143 yards rushing and three touchdowns for Carolina. But a second-half snowstorm and an injury to quarterback Paul Miller helped the Sun Devils to race to victory.

The 1971 Gator Bowl produced a bowl first—brothers opposing each other as coaches in bowl competition. It matched Vince Dooley of Georgia against Bill of Carolina. The game was a great defensive struggle in which the Bulldogs came from behind to win, 7-3.

Carolina capped a 11-1 season in the 1972 Sun Bowl by defeating Texas Tech, 32-28. Quarterback Nick Vidnovic was the big star, completing 14 of 26 passes for 215 yards. He fired a 62-yard scoring strike to Ted Leverenz to help the Tar Heels to a 24-21 halftime lead.

Tech came back to go ahead, 28-24, but Vidnovic hit Leverenz with a 13-yard TD pass with just a minute to play to bring Carolina back. The Tar Heels then added two more points when Ronnie Robinson dropped Raider quarterback Joe Barnes for a safety.

Mike Voight and James Betterson had big days rushing in the 1974 Sun Bowl, but Mississippi State won another thriller, 26-24. The Tar Heels put on a desperation drive in the game's closing moments, but were stopped on a fourth-and-one at their own 48-yard line.

Playing without the injured Voight, Carolina lost to Kentucky, 21-0, in the 1976 Peach Bowl. The Tar Heels had trouble all day with a tough Wildcat defense.

Carolina dropped a heartbreaking 21-17 decision to Nebraska in the 1977 Liberty Bowl. Sparked by quarterback Matt Kupec, the Tar Heels held a 17-7 lead going into the fourth period. However, the Cornhuskers rallied behind reserve quarterback Randy Garcia to score their come-from-behind victory.

Kupec and Amos Lawrence were the big stars in Carolina's 17-15 win over Michigan in the 1979 Gator Bowl. Kupec directed a 97-yard touchdown drive in the third quarter which put the Tar Heels ahead to stay (14-9). Jeff Hayes later added a 32-yard field goal. Michigan scored with 1:28 left to cut the lead to two, but a two-point pass failed.

Kupec completed 18 of 28 passes, while Lawrence ran for 118 yards. They were named co-MVPs.

Lawrence again was the big star in Carolina's 16-7 win over Texas in the 1980 Bluebonnet Bowl. He rushed for 104 yards and had a 59-yard touchdown run. Carolina's other scoring came on a short plunge by Kelvin Bryant and a field goal by Hayes. A key factor in this game was the Carolina defense which limited the Longhorns to just two first downs and only 36 yards of total offense in the second half. Lawrence topped Bryant in voting for the game's outstanding offensive player, while Steve Streater edged Lawrence Taylor in balloting for the defensive MVP.

Bryant and his backup, Ethan Horton, both had big nights as Carolina defeated Arkansas, 31-27, in the 1981 Gator Bowl. Bryant rushed for 148 yards and Horton added 144. They shared the MVP award.

Horton again was the big star in 1982 as Carolina came from behind to defeat seventh-ranked Texas, 26-10, in the Sun Bowl. Coming off the bench in the second half for an injured Bryant, Horton rushed for 119 yards and won MVP honors. Sparked by his play, the Tar Heels rallied from a 10-3 halftime deficit.

However, Horton was not the only Carolina star. The Tar Heel defense, which made two brilliant goal line stands, shut down the Texas attack in the second half. Rob Rogers and Brooks Barwick each kicked two field goals despite weather conditions which featured a wind chill factor of 12 degrees and snow throughout the game.

That Sun Bowl victory made Carolina the first Atlantic Coast Conference school ever to win four straight bowl games. However, that streak came to an end the following year in the 1983 Peach Bowl. Florida State scored the first two times it had the ball and was never headed in a 28-3 victory. The Tar Heels hurt themselves badly with a fumbled punt which allowed the Seminoles to go just 16 yards for their third touchdown and with penalties which killed two drives of their own.

Carolina went to the Aloha Bowl in 1986. The trip to Honolulu was great except for the game itself—a 30-21 loss to Arizona. The Tar Heels spotted the Wildcats a 30-0 lead before putting on a big second-half rally. Arizona seemed to have the game in hand as Carolina struggled offensively against a rugged Wildcat defense. However, Torin Dorn got the Tar Heels going in the third quarter with an Aloha-record 58-yard touchdown run.

Then Norris Davis made two big plays, intercepting a pass and blocking a punt, to get the ball back for the offense. Mark Maye threw to Randy Marriott for one score and got another TD himself on a two-yard run. That cut the lead to 30-21 with over nine minutes to play. But, despite driving inside Wildcat territory on two other occasions, Carolina could get no closer.

That defeat left the all-time Tar Heel bowl record at 6-10.

The Florida Citrus Bowl

In an innovative and unique relationship, the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Florida Citrus Bowl have reached an agreement which may well be the forerunner of most future bowl-conference tieups.

The outstanding feature of the four-year pact, which began last season, is the flexibility it allows both organizations. It contains a "national championship exclusion" option which could allow the ACC to be involved in another major bowl game if the national title is at stake. By the same token, the Florida Citrus Sports Association could bypass the ACC champion if it could land the nation's top team for a title game.

The basic agreement called for the FCSA to invite the ACC champion last year and in 1990. The FCSA can also select the ACC winner in 1989 and 1991, but must exercise that option by the second Tuesday in November.

However, if the FCSA has the opportunity to secure the number one team in the country, according to the weekly United Press International poll, for its game, it may exercise the "national championship exclusion" option and pass on the ACC champion in 1990. But, that option must be exercised by the second Tuesday in November and the FCSA must commit to the ACC winner in 1991.

If the ACC champion, in any year of the agreement, is ranked second, third or fourth in the UPI poll and has the chance to play the top-ranked team in the Cotton, Orange or Sugar Bowls, it has the option to pass on its Florida Citrus Bowl invitation. Again, that option must be exercised by the second Tuesday in November and the FCSA will then have the option to invite the ACC champion for the next two years.

Under these provisions, the ACC winner is committed to the Florida Citrus Bowl if it is the number one team in the country and the bowl payoff is competitive with other New Year's Day bowls.

The conference also guarantees 15,000 ticket sales in the newly renovated Florida Citrus Bowl-Orlando Stadium. Capacity there is now 72,000.

Carolina Athletic Director John Swofford, who chaired the ACC negotiating team which handled these arrangements, hails the agreement.

"I think this is great for the ACC and great for the Florida Citrus Bowl," he says. "The flexibility given each makes it very attractive. We have had teams from our league in this game six times in the last 11 years and all of them have enjoyed the hospitality of the FCSA. It's certainly an outstanding trip for the players and the national television exposure helps us all."

ABC Sports has the television contract for the Florida Citrus through 1993.

The Florida Citrus Bowl team payout should be at least $2.4 million in 1990. Last year's $2.3 million total represented 94.6 percent of the game's gross receipts even though bowls are only required to pay 75 percent to participating institutions.

The FCSA is a non-profit organization supported by almost 1,000 businesses and individuals who volunteer their time and service throughout the year to work on the bowl's 65 committees and 38 events. Children's hospitals, special community projects and educational institutions are the primary recipients each year of profits.

Orlando itself is one of the most popular tourist spots in the country and, thus, a great location for a bowl game. Playing in the Florida Citrus Bowl is a wonderful reward for a successful football season.

Perhaps the best-known attraction in the area is Walt Disney World, which opened a new movie theme park this year to go along with such favorites as EPCOT Center, Magic Kingdom, Typhoon Lagoon and Pleasure Island. But, also nearby are Sea World, Boardwalk and Baseball and Cypress Gardens.

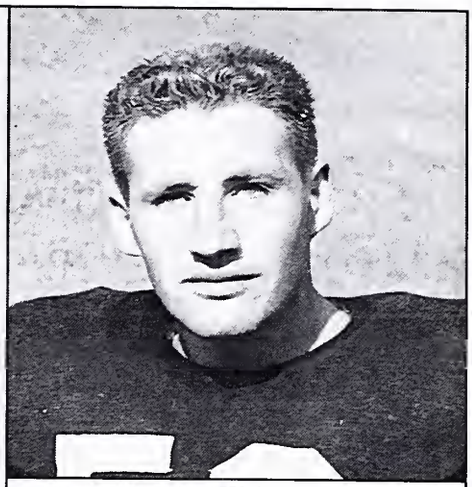
Downtown Orlando has added two new shopping grounds, the Exchange and the Market, next to world-famous Church Street Station. Central Florida now has 66,000 hotel rooms, second only to New York City in this country.

While the football game is the grand finale, the FCSA preludes are sensational. For sports, there are golf, tennis, basketball, lacrosse, rugby, running and sailing. For entertainment, the FCSA offers ballooning, a fashion show, a black tie gala, band competition, street parties, pep rallies and a star-studded New Year's Eve celebration at Sea World.

It's a wonderful time for the competing teams and their families. And the ACC champion is now a part of it.

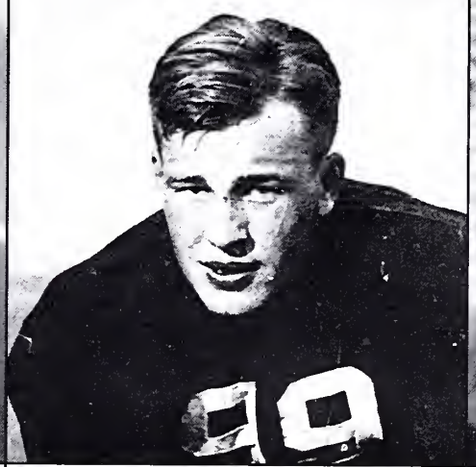
Five Retired Jersies

Charlie Justice



Art Weiner

Andy Bershak



George Barclay

Cotton Sutherland

Five Carolina football numbers—22, 46, 50, 59 and 99—have been retired over the years in honor of the men who wore them.

The number 22 was almost as well known in this state as the athlete who wore it—Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice. One of college football's all-time superstars, Justice was an All-America halfback at Carolina from 1946 to 1949. In fact, those years generally are known as simply "The Justice Era" in Chapel Hill.

Justice still holds numerous school records, including the career total offense mark. A tailback in Coach Carl Snavely's single-wing attack, he was a dynamic weapon as a runner, passer, punter and return specialist. Justice is a member of the College Football Hall of Fame. A lengthy story on his career appears elsewhere in this book.

Bill "Cotton" Sutherland was a blocking back on the first of the Justice teams in 1946. Although just a freshman from Laurinburg, he showed great promise as a player and was extremely popular with his teammates.

However, in the spring of 1947 he was killed in an automobile accident. Snavely was stunned by the loss of Sutherland's life and was instrumental in getting his number 46 retired.

Number 50 belonged to Art Weiner, a two-time All-America end in the late Forties. It appeared Weiner was meant for stardom when he scored a touchdown on his first collegiate play. That came against Virginia Tech in 1946. He did not disappoint anyone.

In 1947 Weiner caught 20 passes for 396 yards, averaging 19.8 yards a reception. It was an amazing total considering that the Tar Heels were a power-packed team, loaded with talent and featuring a number of outstanding ends.

However, Weiner's figures were to get even more impressive. He won All-America honors as a junior, catching 31 passes and finishing seventh in the nation in receiving. As a senior he led the country in pass-catching with 52 receptions. That total still stands as the school single-season record. His 106 career catches are the second most in Tar Heel history.

But, Weiner was more than just a great receiver. He was also a star defender in a time when players were expected to play both ways. In fact, his most famous play at Carolina probably was one he made on defense. He stormed through the Duke line to block a field goal attempt on the game's last play to preserve a 21-20 Tar Heel win over the Blue Devils in his senior year.

Weiner went on from Carolina to play in the Senior Bowl and was voted the game's outstanding lineman. He played briefly with the old New York Yankees, but a knee injury ended his career.

How great of a player was Weiner?

Well, Wally Butts of Georgia, one of the game's winningest coaches and himself a former end, once called Weiner "the greatest pass-catching end I've ever seen."

Another end, Andy Bershak, wore 59. Also a two-way performer, Bershak won All-America honors in 1939. He was a brilliant defensive player and a solid receiver, too.

Bershak also played basketball at Carolina. He wasn't a high scorer, but was a rugged rebounder and, as might be expected, an excellent defender.

However, Bershak believed there was more to life than just athletics. He tried to excel in every phase of student life and did so. He was an honor student and a member of the Order of the Golden Fleece and the Order of the Grail, the University's two most prestigious honorary societies. He also served as president of the Athletic Association.

A man with a great love for his alma mater, he stayed on at Carolina as a graduate assistant coach.

Unfortunately, his life came to a tragically early end. He came down with Bright's Disease and died in 1943.

Carolina's first All-America, George Barclay, wore the number 99. He was a three-year starter at offensive guard and linebacker. At 5-11 and 185 pounds, he excelled as a downfield blocker and was a tenacious tackler.

Barclay was a special thorn in the side of Virginia fans. In 1933 he intercepted a Cavalier pass and ran 35 yards for a touchdown as the Tar Heels scored a 14-0 victory. The following year he opened the game's scoring with a 55-yard interception return for a touchdown as Carolina won, 25-6.

Carolina posted a 7-1-1 record in his senior year as Barclay became the school's first All-America player. He later returned to Chapel Hill to coach the Tar Heels in the 1950's.

Why Tar Heels?

University of North Carolina athletic teams are known as the Tar Heels because North Carolina is "The Tar Heel State."

There are a number of different stories about how the nickname was originally acquired. The two most widely accepted explanations are repeated here. The fact that the production of tar, pitch and turpentine was for many years the state's principal industry is a key element in both stories.

One legend has the nickname being applied to the state's residents as long ago as the Revolutionary War. According to this story, the troops of British General Cornwallis were fording what is now known as the Tar River between Rocky Mount and Battleboro when they discovered that tar had been dumped into the stream to impede their crossing. When they finally got across the river they found their feet completely black with tar. Their observation that anyone who waded North Carolina rivers would acquire tar heels led to the nickname first being used.

Others say the nickname was acquired during the War Between the States. During one of that war's fiercest battles a column supporting North Carolina troops was driven from the field. After the battle, the North Carolinians who had successfully fought it out alone, happened to meet the regiment which had fled to safety and were greeted with the question, "Any more tar down in the Old North State, boys?"

"No, not a bit," shot back one of the North Carolina soldiers. "Old Jeff's bought it all up," he went on, referring to Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy.

"Is that so? What's he going to do with it?"

"He's going to put it on you'ns heels to make you stick better in the next fight."

Upon hearing of the incident, Robert E. Lee smiled and said to a fellow officer, "God bless the Tar Heel boys."

A Ram For A Mascot?

For over 60 years the mascot of North Carolina's football team has been a ram. The current sideline star for the Tar Heels is Rameses IXI.

Since Carolina's nickname is Tar Heels, it might seem strange to have a ram as a mascot. It is. But, there is a good explanation. It's offered by Vic Huggins, Carolina's head cheerleader back in 1924.

"In 1924 school spirit was at a peak," Huggins once explained. "But something seemed to be missing. One day it hit me. Georgia had a bulldog for a mascot and State a wolf. What Carolina needed was a symbol."

Two years earlier the Tar Heels had posted a brilliant 9-1 record. The star of that 1922 team was a bruising fullback named Jack Merritt. Merritt was nicknamed "the battering ram" for the way he plunged into lines. It seemed natural to Huggins to link a mascot with Merritt's unusual sobriquet.

"Charlie Woollen, the athletic business manager at that time, agreed with the idea and give us $25 to purchase a fitting mascot," said Huggins.

Rameses the First was shipped in from Texas, arriving just in time to be introduced at a pep rally before the VMI game. Complete with a mongram blanket on his back, Rameses helped make the pep rally one of the school's greatest.

Then the ram was taken to Emerson Field where Carolina was an underdog to a strong VMI team. But, for three quarters the Tar Heels battled the visitors to a scoreless tie.

Late in the fourth period Carolina's Bunn Hackney was called upon to attempt a field goal. Before taking the field he stopped to rub Rameses's head for good luck.

Seconds later Hackney's 30-yard dropkick sailed between the goalposts, giving the Tar Heels a 3-0 victory and a legendary mascot.

From that November afternoon in 1924, the deeds and experiences of Rameses I and his successors have been the basis for countless anecdotes.

For instance, there was Rameses I making his first indoor appearance. Huggins was again the originator of the idea, the Tin Can was the scene and a basketball game was the event.

A theatrical debut with bright lights and a chorus was planned for the ram's introduction before a capacity audience. But when Rameses was led to midcourt at halftime, it became evident that he was not housebroken. In addition to being his first, that was also Rameses's last basketball game.

Tar Heels rams have traveled everywhere from New York City (for the Carolina-Notre Dame game in 1949) to Jacksonville for Carolina's Gator Bowl appearances.

Generally, the highlight of each season for Rameses is trying to outwit Duke students who always try to ram-nap him before the traditional big game with the Blue Devils.

School Colors

The adoption of light blue and white as the University of North Carolina's colors dates back to the 19th Century.

When the University reopened following the War Between the States most social activities were directed by two literary societies, the Dialectic and Philanthropic. The official color of the Di was light blue and that of the Phi white. Since society membership was compulsory for all students, the opinions and activities of these organizations were by nature of circumstances all embracing. It was the custom for all men from localities west of Chapel Hill to affiliate with the Di and generally for students from the east to become members of the Phi.

On public occasions such as commencement exercises, the student officers, marshals and ball managers were chosen equally from the membership of the two societies. It had long been the custom of each society for its members to wear its color on such occasions. However, the chief marshal and chief ball manager, one from the Di and the other from the Phi, wore combination light blue and white regalias and rosettes signifying that they represented the whole student body and not just one of the societies.

Later, when intercollegiate athletics were established and students began accompanying teams to other colleges or cities, the question of what to wear became a problem. Certainly, the students wanted to be associated with the University, but the school had no official colors. So it seemed only natural for the fans to adorn themselves with the same combination as that used by the chief marshals and ball managers, colors which represented not membership in a society, but in the University student body.

The light blue worn by Tar Heel students today has many different names. It is called simply light blue, powder blue, sky blue or Columbia Blue among other things. Generally, however, it is just referred to as Carolina Blue. The accomplishments of Tar Heel athletes have made the color synonimous with the University so it now simply bears it name.

The University

The Old Well

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was the first state university to open its doors and the only public university in the nation to award degrees in the 18th century.

The cornerstone for Old East, the nation's first state university building, was laid on Oct. 12, 1793. Fifteen months later UNC opened its doors and, by 1860, only Yale University had more students.

From those beginnings, the growth and development of North Carolina always has been influenced by the University. It has trained many of the state's leaders, including nearly half of its governors, and a U.S. president, James K. Polk, is among its graduates.

Now the flagship of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, the University at Chapel Hill is ranked among the great institutions of higher education in the nation and the world.

The University, which is preparing to observe its 200th anniversary, has earned that reputation because of its achievements in teaching, research and public service.

UNC is the largest, most comprehensive institution in North Carolina and a member of the select group of major universities that form the American Association of Universities. Its 14 colleges and schools provide instruction in more than 100 fields, offering 67 bachelor's, 88 master's, 61 doctoral and four professional degrees. In 1988-89, Carolina enrolled more than 23,000 students and employed 2,000 full-time faculty members and 5,500 staff members. Its living alumni total about 169,000, more than 60,000 of whom have graduated since 1973.

The quality of the education the University offers continues to receive national acclaim. U.S. News and World Report magazine ranked Carolina third among American public universities in a 1988 survey. UNC was listed in the national university category, which is made up of those schools offering a full range of baccalaureate programs, granting the largest number of doctoral degrees and receiving at least $12.5 million annually in federal research funding. In 1987, Carolina was ranked 11th among major research universities and was one of only three public schools at the top of the list. Carolina placed ninth in the magazine's 1985 ranking.

Richard Moll, author of "The Public Ivys: A Guide to America's Best Colleges and Universities," picked UNC as one of eight public institutions in the nation equivalent to a traditional Ivy Leage school. He also called Chapel Hill "the perfect college town" in his 1985 book.

Education writers at The New York Times also have praised Carolina, including it on the list of schools they call "The Best Buys in College Education." Carolina also made the Times' "1984-85 Guide To Selective Colleges," placing in the top 6 percent of the 275 colleges rated.

Those honors are among the latest indications that the University's stature as one of the nation's most prestigious research institutions continues to grow.

Carolina received a record $127.9 million in research funding during the 1987-88 fiscal year. The total, a 22 percent increase over the previous year, marked the second time the campus had topped the $100 million mark. In addition, funding from the National Institutes of Health rose 16 percent in 1987, placing UNC among the top 20 schools in the nation for the third year in a row. Carolina was ranked 17th in the nation with awards totaling $66.7 million. These gains have come at a time when federal research funding has seen only modest increases. They also have enabled the University to continue to make a large contribution to the economic growth of the Triangle area and North Carolina.

The most recent comprehensive evaluation published by the National Academy Press also ranked Carolina as one of the nation's best graduate and research institutions. The faculty was rated tops in the Southeast and one of the best in the nation. Other studies have ranked numerous schools and departments among the best, and the University's 3-million volume library system consistently is listed among the country's top research libraries.

University faculty members are considered leaders in American higher education. They either hold or have held major positions in virtually every national scholarly or professional association. More than 60 faculty members have served as presidents of national organizations in recent years. The Pulitzer Prize has been awarded to faculty members, alumni and to books published by the UNC Press, the oldest academic press in the South.

Students have made their mark. Five have been chosen as Rhodes Scholars in the 1980s alone, and 28 winners of that honor have come from the Chapel Hill campus since 1904. The Morehead Scholarship Program, patterned after the Rhodes and considered the best of its kind, annually brings about 65 outstanding freshmen to Chapel Hill.

The 729-acre campus, once called "The Noble Grove," is among the most beautiful in the nation. About 200 permanent buildings include the nation's two oldest state university buildings, Old East and Person Hall. Old East, still used as a dormitory, and Playmakers Theatre, an 1852 Greek-revival building, are registered as National Historic Landmarks. In the 1980s two of the largest public buildings in the state — the Walter Royal Davis Library and the Dean E. Smith Center — have opened. Other buildings recently completed include the Morehead Chemistry Teaching Laboratory, the Sitterson Computer Science Building, the Kenan Center and the Public Health and Environmental Sciences Center. When built, the Continuing Education and Conference Center also is expected to usher in a new era of nontraditional and continuing education.

The approaching Bicentennial Observance will mark the 200th anniversary of the founding of the University and the birth of public higher education. While this event will be a time to honor Carolina's rich history and great traditions, it also will be when the University begins laying the cornerstone for its third century of service to the state, nation and world.
